

Towards a Liberal Utopia?

EDITED BY PHILIP BOOTH

iea

The Institute of Economic Affairs

CONTENTS

The authors	12
Foreword	21
Acknowledgements	24
List of figures and tables	25

1 Introduction	31
Philip Booth

PART 1: TIMES FUTURE?

2 Health 2055	41
Tim Evans and Helen Evans
Promise and reality: how the NHS failed people	41
The political economy of health rationing	43
Tiptoeing back to market	44
A real market	46
Questioning the role of a state	48
Rise of the therapeutic state	49
References	54
3 Education reclaimed	56
James Tooley
A dream of education without the state	56
Three principles	57
The end of 'school'	58
Education for its own sake	60

The journey	61
References	66
4 Policing a liberal society	67
John Blundell
Introduction	67
The growth of crime	67
Better policing	69
Exploding myths	69
Successful ways of preventing crime	74
Applying these lessons to the UK	78
Conclusion: Major institutional change	82
References	84
5 Pension provision in 2055	86
Philip Booth
Introduction	86
State involvement in pensions	86
Time to move on	88
The difficulty of moving on	91
The minimal state in pension provision: an outline proposal	91
A more pragmatic approach	94
Transition arrangements	97
Conclusion	97
References	99
6 Social security in a free society	99
David G. Green
Introduction	99
The safety net	102
The alternative	103
Policy options for people out of work	104
Policy options for those in work on low pay	105

Provision for old age	106
Conclusion	107
7 Limits on the tax burden	108
Tim Congdon
What is the limit on the tax burden?	108
Unsustainability of very high tax rates	110
Tax policy over the coming generations	116
References	117
8 Britain's relationship with the European Union	119
Patrick Minford
Introduction	119
Agricultural protectionism	120
Manufacturing protectionism	121
Services: a regime of internal protectionism	122
Harmonisation	124
The EU pensions crisis	125
What should the UK do?	126
9 Regulating the labour market	128
J. R. Shackleton
Increasing regulation	128
Freedom of contract?	130
What does regulation do?	133
The impact on the economy as a whole	135
Employment regulation in the long term	137
References	142
10 Free trade: the next 50 years	144
Razeen Sally
Taking stock: the case for free trade, past and present	144
Taking stock: free trade in practice	146

Looking ahead: world political-economic trends	148
Looking ahead: making the case for free trade in the next 50 years	150
Conclusion	153
11 Competition in land use planning: an agenda for the twenty-first century	155
Mark Pennington
Introduction	155
The case for markets in land use planning	155
Private land use planning: past, present and future	159
Conclusion: a liberal utopia	164
References	164
12 Beyond Kyoto: real solutions to greenhouse emissions from developing countries	166
Roger Bate and David Montgomery
Introduction	166
Economics, energy and emissions	167
Energy use and economic growth in developing countries	168
Choice of technology in developing countries	171
Economic freedom, market imperfections and greenhouse gas emissions	173
Impediments to efficient energy use in particular countries	181
Policy implications	182
References	184
13 The environment in 2055	187
Julian Morris
Introduction	187
Benefits, risks and trade-offs	187
Private regulation: So Safe and Bright Future	189
Over-fishing and individual transferable quotas	191

Privatisation and conservation	193
The decline of natural disasters	194
The last 50 years	195
Conclusion	199
14 Capitalism	200
David Henderson and Geoffrey Owen
Capitalism yesterday and today	200
Capitalism tomorrow	205
Economic progress and individual freedom	210
References	211
15 A constitution for liberty	212
John Meadowcroft
A written, codified constitution	213
Constitutional limits on government	214
Inter-jurisdictional competition: national, regional and local government	216
Separation of powers and a constitutional court	217
A constitutional monarchy	217
The Houses of Parliament	218
Conclusion	220
References	221
16 The Hayekian future of economic methodology	222
Paul Ormerod
Introduction	222
The Hayekian challenge to twentieth-century economics	223
Hayek, complexity and knowledge	226
Bounded rationality and imperfect information: the real world of markets	227
Hayek, Vernon Smith and the future of 21st-century economics	231
References	231

PART 2: TIMES PAST

17 An independent station	235
Ralph Harris
In the wake of Keynes – and Hayek	237
Harris and Seldon begin the fight back	239
The genius of Arthur Seldon	241
Recruiting among the awkward squad	243
And the world said ...	245
18 Playing the fool with inflation	248
Ralph Harris
Full employment at any price	249
Earlier monetary instruction	251
Friedman enters the fray	253
How much unemployment?	255
Hayek's competing currencies	256
19 Now for 'planning'	258
Ralph Harris
On to 'growthmanship'	259
Behold: the National Plan	261
Does planning never work?	262
... even in France	264
Not forgetting free trade	265
The verdict on 'planning'	266
20 Market versus state	269
Ralph Harris
Incorrigible socialism	269
What about the unions?	271
Why not welfare?	273
Public choice	276

21 Behind enemy lines	281
Ralph Harris
Cool reception	282
Planning again	283
Enter bête noire Shonfield	286
Et tu, William!	287
Keep smiling	289
Honourable defeat	291
Valediction	292
Appendix: The development of the IEA's academic reputation – a personal reflection	294
Arthur Seldon
About the IEA	300