

INCENTIVE-BASED BUDGETING SYSTEMS IN PUBLIC UNIVERSITIES

Edited by

*Douglas M. Priest, William E. Becker,
Don Hossler, and Edward P. St. John*

Edward Elgar

Cheltenham, UK • Northampton, MA, USA

CONTENTS

Figures and Tables	vii
Acknowledgments	ix
List of Contributors	xi
 1. Why Incentive-Based Budgeting Systems in the Public Sector and Why Now?	 1
Douglas M. Priest, William E. Becker, Don Hossler, and Edward P. St. John
 Overview
2. The Case, if Any, for Responsibility Center Budgeting	9
Edward L. Whalen
3. The Efficiency of Responsibility Center Management within State Universities	25
John Douglas Wilson
4. Revenue Flux and University Behavior	55
Larry L. Leslie, Ronald L. Oaxaca, and Gary Rhoades
 Case Studies
5. Responsibility Center Budgeting and Management at Indiana University	93
Kenneth R. R. Gros Louis and Maynard Thompson
6. Responsibility Center Budgeting at the University of Toronto	109
Daniel W. Lang
7. Activity-Based Budgeting at the University of Michigan	137
Paul N. Courant and Marilyn Knepp
 Effects and Lessons
8. Budget Incentive Structures and the Improvement of College Teaching	161
Michael B. Paulsen and Edward P. St. John
9. Reward Structures and Faculty Behavior Under Responsibility Center Management	185
William E. Becker and Neil D. Theobald
10. Using Performance Indicators to Evaluate Decentralized Budgeting Systems and Institutional Performance	205
Robert K. Toutkoushian and Cherry Danielson
11. Incentive-Based Budgeting: An Evolving Approach	227
Douglas M. Priest, Edward P. St. John, and William Tobin
 Index	 237