

Marketization and Democracy East Asian Experiences

Samantha F. Ravich

Center for Strategic and International Studies,
Washington, DC

Contents

Preface	page<sup>xiii</sup>
Acknowledgments   •	xv
1 Introduction	1
PART ONE: THE MODEL
2 Theories of economic development and polity	7
3 The model	12
Linking marketization to democracy •	12
The foundation and requisites for democracy	21
4 Quantitative analysis of democracy	30
Theoretical model and empirical implementation	31
Summary statistics	36
Empirical evaluation	47
Conclusion	56
PART TWO: QUALITATIVE COMPARATIVE HISTORICAL STUDIES—KOREA, TAIWAN, INDONESIA, AND CHINA
5 Korea: A balancing of power	63
Korean democracy	65
Progress as an ideology: the First Republic	66
Democratically elected and short lived: the Second Republic	71
Park Chung Hee: the Third Republic	71
Martial Law: the Fourth Republic	72
Chun Doo Hwan: the Fifth Republic	81
Roh Tae Woo: the Sixth Republic	88
The future of Korean democracy	90

6	Taiwan: The bringing in of new elites	95
	The roots of marketization and democracy in Taiwan	97
	The KMT on Taiwan: the early years	101
	Consolidation of power: the 1950s and 1960s	105
	Limited steps toward liberalization: the 1970s	113
	The transition to democracy: the 1980s	119
	Consolidation and transformation	129
	Stumbling blocks to further democracy	130
7	Indonesia: Unrealized potential	137
	The period of guided democracy: 1959-1965	139
	A coup, another coup, and a new order: the 1960s	141
	"Economics first, politics second": the 1970s	145
	Dynamism with stability: the 1980s	153
	Time for a change? 1990-1997	160
	Scenarios for the future	174
8	China: A transformation of the societal contract	177
	Agricultural reform and the beginning of a cultural transformation: 1979-1982	179
	Cultural change and its effect on the state: mid 1980s	188
	Breach of contract: late 1980s	198
	Drafting a new contract: the 1990s	204
	Conclusion	214
PART THREE: CONCLUSIONS AND POLICY IMPLICATIONS
9	Conclusions and policy implications	223
	Prospects for democracy in East Asia	223
	"Asian democracy"	229
	The role of the U.S. government	232
	The role of the U.S. private domain	233
	The role of multinational/multilateral organizations	235
	Concluding remarks	236
Appendix
A	Two-stage least squares	237
B	Codebook	240
C	Serial correlation	245
Bibliography
Index		