

Shadow States

India, China and the Himalayas, 1910–1962

Bérénice Guyot-Réchar

King's College London

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

Contents

List of Figures	page ix
List of Maps	x
Acknowledgements	xi
Transcription and Terminology	xiv
Chronology	xvi
Acronyms and Abbreviations	xviii
Glossary	xix
Characters	xxi
Introduction	1
Part I 1910–1950	29
1 False Starts: The First Rush towards the Eastern Himalayas	31
2 The Return of the Fair-Weather State: The Second World War and the Himalayas	59
Part II 1950–1959	93
3 Exploration, Expansion, Consolidation? State Power and its Limitations	95
4 The Art of Persuasion: Development in a Border Space	127
Part III 1959–1962	163
5 A Void Screaming to Be Filled: Militarisation and State–Society Relations	165
6 Salt Tastes the Same in India and China: A Different Kind of Security Dilemma	201

viii	Contents
7	Open War: State-Making's Dress Rehearsal	232
	Conclusion	265
	Maps	273
	Select Bibliography	280
	Index	310