

Representing Public Credit

Credible commitment, fiction, and the rise of the financial subject

Natalie Roxburgh

Contents

List of figures	ix
Acknowledgments	x
Introduction	1
Literature review	6
Selection of texts	11
1 Historical contexts for “the economic model”	18
Economically constituted property and the fiction of the modern state	21
On interest: fictions of the individual and the public good	26
On money: mediating individual interest	28
Credible commitment and the Bank of England	32
Public opinion and the fiction of disinterestedness	36
PART I
Framing credible commitment through fiction	47
2 The public good, credible framing, and Daniel Defoe’s fictions	49
The virtuous projector	53
A disinterested and depersonalized state: An Essay upon Publick Credit	56
A call for better management: Lady Credit in The Review	60
The South Sea Bubble and The Compleat English Tradesman	64
Credible framing and fiction	73
3 The Bank of England, virtue, and the Pamela controversy	84
The Bank of England in texts	86
The Bank of England as text	89

Accounting and ideology in Pamela	94
The form of Pamela's virtue	96
Representing the counter-fact in the Pamela controversy	101
The account as contract in Clarissa	105
From virtue to the virtual	111

PART II

Framing fiction through credible commitment 119

4 Paper contracts, public fictions, and the money it-narrative 121

Paper credit or paper money?	124
The contractual banknote	127
Public credit and paper money in political economy	130
Credit, consumption, and the it-narrative	135
Chrysal: naturalizing alchemy	137
Adventures of a Bank-Note: the virtual publics of public credit	143

5 Abstraction, social mediation, and the novel of sensibility 153

People of the Royal Exchange: social mediation in David Simple	157
Rethinking quixotism and sensibility through public credit	164
Towards a social critique of credit	169
Critical discourses on public credit: luxury and consumerism	171
Cecilia and the rise of the financial subject	173
Public credit and the rise of the novel	178

Conclusion 185

Bibliography	190
---------------------	-----

Index	201
--------------	-----