

From Brand Vision to Brand Evaluation

Strategically Building and Sustaining
Brands

Leslie de Chernatony

Published in association with The Chartered Institute of Marketing

BUTTERWORTH
HEINEMANN

OXFORD AUCKLAND BOSTON JOHANNESBURG MELBOURNE NEW DELHI

Foreword	ix
Preface	xi
About the author	xvii

Part One The Changed Notion of Brand Management

1	A balanced perspective on brands	3
	Summary	3
	Why the interest in brands?	3
	A balanced perspective on brands	4
	Staff and brand building	6
	Multifaceted nature of brands	7
	Structuring to manage brands	12
	Conclusions	13
	Brand marketing action checklist	14
	Further reading	17
2	The diverse interpretations of 'brand'	18
	Summary	18
	Spectrum of brand interpretations	18
	Input perspectives on brand interpretations	20
	Output perspectives on brand interpretations	39
	Time perspectives on brand interpretations	42
	Facilitating a company-wide integrated view about the brand	47
	Conclusions	52
	Brand marketing action checklist	53
	Further reading	57

Part Two Planning for Integrated Brands

3 A strategic process for building integrated brands	61
Summary	61
The importance of integrated branding programmes	62
Models to enhance integrated branding	64
Striving for integrated digital brands	70
Developing integrated brands through understanding employees' motivations	71
The stages in building and sustaining brands	75
Conclusions	78
Brand marketing action checklist	79
Further reading	84

Part Three Employing the Brand Building Process

4 Brand visioning	87
Summary	88
The brand's vision	88
Envisioned future	91
Brand purpose	95
Brand values	99
Core vs. peripheral values	107
Aligning brand and staff values	108
Conclusion	413
Brand marketing action checklist	114
Further reading	121
5 The importance of organisational culture on brands	123
Summary	124
The link between organisational culture and branding	124
Perspectives on organisational culture	125
Defining and measuring organisational culture	129
Auditing organisational culture	131
Appropriateness of the organisational culture	134
One or several organisational cultures?	137
Striving for a merged unified culture	139
Strengthening a brand through organisational culture	140
The impact of organisational culture on brand performance	144
Conclusions	147
Brand marketing action checklist'	148
Further reading	151

Setting brand objectives	153
Summary	154
Long- and short-term brand objectives	154
Long-term brand objectives	155
Short-term brand objectives	158
Catalytic mechanisms	162
Conclusions	163
Brand marketing action checklist	164
Further reading	165
Auditing the brandsphere	166
Summary	167
The five forces	167
The corporation	167
Distributors	173
Customers	176
"Competitors	189
Macro-environment	197
Summarising the impact of the five forces	197
Conclusions	199
Brand marketing action checklist	199
Further reading	201
Synthesising the nature of a brand	203
Summary	204
The shape of the promise	204
Understanding the brand essence through the brand pyramid	205
Alternative perspectives on brand essence	211
Models characterising brands	214
From brand essence to brand positioning	219
From brand essence to brand personality	224
Conclusions	227
Brand marketing action checklist	229
Further reading	232
Implementing and resourcing brands	234
Summary	235
Structuring to deliver the brand with its unique mix of resources	235
Internal considerations about the value chain	236
Mechanistic internal implementation considerations	237
Humanistic internal implementation considerations	246
Arriving at the final form of the brand	260
The atomic model of the brand	261
The integrated brand	269
Conclusions	269
Brand marketing action checklist	271
Further reading	274

10	Brand evaluation	277
	Summary	278
	Multi-dimensional evaluation	278
	Brand vision	281
	Organisational culture	281
	Brand objectives	282
	Brand essence	282
	Implementation and brand resourcing	283
	Summarising the brand's health	283
	Conclusion	284
	Brand marketing action checklist	285
	Further reading	285
	Index	287