

Thorsten Voigt

The Force of Mobilization

What Strategic Management Can Learn
From Social Movements

Foreword by

Prof. Dr. Franz Liebl

Logos Verlag Berlin

λογος

Table of Contents

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS	VIII
TABLE OF CONTENTS	X
LIST OF FIGURES	XIV
LIST OF ABBREVIATIONS	XVI
1 INTRODUCTION	1
1.1 The Aim of this Thesis	1
1.2 Research Approach and Thesis Structure	6
2 THE ANALOGY OF FIRMS AND SOCIAL MOVEMENTS	12
2.1 Mapping the Terrain - What are Social Movements?	13
2.1.1 Informal Networks Based on Shared Beliefs	15
2.1.2 Issues, Protest, and Mobilization	19
2.2 Mobilization as a Perspective on Strategic Management	29
2.2.1 Goals: Economic Success in a Competitive Environment	31
2.2.2 Means: Consistent Pattern in Actions	34
2.2.3 Context: Internal and External Stakeholders	38
2.3 Summary	47

3	MOBILIZATION - A FRAMEWORK OF REFERENCE	51
3.1	Mobilization - The Process of Creating Collective Action	52
3.2	The IMF Case Study	59
3.3	The Strategic Quality of Mobilization Processes	62
3.4	Summary	64
4	THE ORGANIZATIONAL DIMENSION OF MOBILIZATION FROM A SOCIAL MOVEMENT PERSPECTIVE	67
4.1	Categorization of Relevant Actors	68
4.2	Organization and Leadership Structures in Social Movements	73
4.2.1	Micro and Meso Level Organization	74
4.2.2	Leadership and Leaders	83
4.3	Summary	93
5	THE ORGANIZATIONAL DIMENSION OF MOBILIZATION FROM A STRATEGIC MANAGEMENT PERSPECTIVE	96
5.1	Identification and Categorization of Relevant Stakeholders	97
5.1.1	Issue Analysis and Stakeholder Identification	98
5.1.2	Stakeholder Segmentation and Identification of Mobilization Potential	102
5.1.3	Mapping the Stakeholder Terrain	109

5.2	Organization and Leadership Structures in Mobilization Processes	111
5.2.1	Micro Level Structures	112
5.2.2	Meso Level Structures	116
5.2.3	Leaders as Interface Managers in Mobilization Processes	123
5.3	Summary and Implications	133
6	THE COGNITIVE DIMENSION OF MOBILIZATION FROM A SOCIAL MOVEMENT PERSPECTIVE	136
6.1	Ideology	137
6.1.1	What is Ideology?	138
6.1.2	The Content and Structure of Ideology	142
6.1.3	Ideology - Summary and Limitations	155
6.2	Framing	160
6.2.1	Collective Action Frames, Master Frames and Ideology	162
6.2.2	Framing Processes	168
6.2.3	Frame Resonance	172
6.3	Summary	177
7	THE COGNITIVE DIMENSION OF MOBILIZATION FROM A STRATEGIC MANAGEMENT PERSPECTIVE	182
7.1	What does Ideology Mean in the Context of Strategic Management?	183
7.1.1	How Strategic Management and Related Fields Describe the Role of Fundamental Belief Systems for Business Organizations	184
7.1.2	The Concept of Organizational Ideology	190

7.1.3	The Strategic Quality Of Organizational Ideology - Lessons Learned and Limitations	209
7.2	What Does Framing Mean in the Context of Strategic Management?	214
7.2.1	The Value-Added of Applying Framing in a Strategic Management Context	215
7.2.2	The Meaning of Frames and Framing for Business Organizations	219
7.2.3	Frame System, Framing Processes and Frame Resonance	225
7.2.4	The Body Shop's Slow Food Concept - A Fictional Case Study	232
7.3	Summary and Implications	235
8	STRATEGIC MANAGEMENT AS A MOBILIZATION PROCESS	243
9.	CONCLUSION	252
	APPENDICES	256
	A. 1 Different Forms of Resource Accumulation	256
	A.2 Tactics for Managing and Partnering With External Stakeholders	257
	REFERENCES	259