

Putin's Propaganda Machine

Soft Power and Russian Foreign Policy

Marcel H. Van Herpen

ROWMAN & LITTLEFIELD
Lanham • Boulder • New York • London

Contents

Author Note and Acknowledgments	ix
Glossary and Abbreviations	xi
Introduction	1
I: The Search for Russian “Soft Power”	17
1 Russian Soft Power: Hard Power in a Velvet Glove	19
2 The Three Components of the Kremlin’s Soft-Power Offensive: Mimesis, Rollback, and Invention	33
3 “Reputation Laundering”: How Western Communication Firms Help Improve the Kremlin’s Image	47
4 The Propaganda Offensive in the Western Media, Part I: The Creation of Russia Today (RT), Russia beyond the Headlines, and Rossiya Segodnya	67
5 The Propaganda Offensive in the Western Media, Part II: Buying Western Newspapers, the Increasing Grip on the Social Media, the “Kremlin School of Bloggers”	81
6 Financing Politicians and Political Parties	99
7 Spies and Spooks as Soft-Power Instruments?	113
II: Creating a New Missionary Ideology: The Role of the Russian Orthodox Church	127
8 The Russian Orthodox Church: The Kremlin’s Secret Weapon?	129
9 Attacking Universal Human Rights in the International Forums	143
10 A Global Church for the Kremlin?	153

11	The Russian Orthodox Church: A Pillar of Russian Neoimperialism?	165
III:	Undermining Atlanticism: Building a “Strategic Triangle” Moscow-Berlin-Paris	177
12	An Emerging Moscow-Berlin Axis?	179
13	Germany’s Kremlin-Friendly Political Class	199
14	Russian-German “Verflechtung”: Creating Mutual Economic Interdependence	217
15	The Kremlin’s Conquest of France	241
16	Conclusions	267
	Bibliography	283
	Index	291
	About the Author	319