

Martin G.Walser

Brand Strength

Building and Testing Models Based on Experiential Information

With a Foreword by Prof. Dr. Hans MiJhlbacher

Deutscher Universitats-Verlag

Table of contents

Foreword	V
Preface	VII
List of figures	xm
List of tables	XV
1. Introduction	1
1.1. Research problem and purpose	1
1.2. Research process and structure	3
2. Brands	6
2.1. The importance of brands	6
2.2. Historical evolution of brands	9
2.3. Functions of brands	12
2.3.1. Consumer-related brand functions	12
2.3.2. Distributor-related brand functions	17
2.3.3. Manufacturer-related brand functions	19
2.4. Defining "brand"	20
2.4.1. Etymological and semantic origins of the term brand	23
2.4.2. Meanings of "brand" in the international literature	24
2.4.3. Meanings of "brand" in the german literature	34
2.4.4. Establishing a brand definition for the use in this work	39
2.5. Objects of branding activities	41
3. Brand evaluation	44
3.1. Causes for the interest in brand evaluation	44
3.2. Brand evaluation: classification and areas of application	47
3.2.1. Purposes within a financial perspective on brand valuation	48
3.2.2. Purposes within a marketing perspective on brand evaluation	51
3.3. Discussion of terminology	52
4. Brand strength	56
4.1. Classification of existing definitions	56

4.2. Defining "brand strength"	58
5. Measuring brand strength	60
5.1. A consumer-behavior framework for brand strength measures	61
5.1.1. Cognition-based measures of brand strength	65
5.1.1.1. Brands as stored information	65
5.1.1.2. Brand associations	68
5.1.1.2.1. Description of the measure	69
5.1.1.2.2. Research techniques	72
5.1.1.2.3. Empirical results	74
5.1.1.3. Brand awareness	79
5.1.1.3.1. Description of measures and research techniques	80
5.1.1.3.2. Empirical results	83
5.1.2. Affect-based brand strength measures	86
5.1.2.1. Attitudinal brand strength measures	86
5.1.2.1.1. Description of measures and research techniques	87
5.1.2.1.2. Empirical results	88
5.1.2.2. Preference-based brand strength measures	90
5.1.2.2.1. Description of measures and research techniques	90
5.1.2.2.2. Empirical results	91
5.1.3. Intention-based brand strength measures	95
5.1.3.1. Description of measures and research techniques	95
5.1.3.2. Empirical results	97
5.1.4. Behavior-based brand strength measures	98
5.1.4.1. Description of measures and research techniques	99
5.1.4.2. Empirical results	101
5.2. Summary of brand strength measures	105
5.3. Current problems in measuring brand strength	111
5.4. Assessing the necessity for multiple-construct measurement approaches	115
5.5. Conclusions and recommendations for measuring brand strength	127
6. Brand strength formation	130
6.1. A process of brand strength formation	131

6.1.1. Basic considerations	131
6.1.2. Models of information acquisition/processing & consumer learning	134
6.1.3. Brand-specific evaluation of consumer learning models	137
6.2. A conceptual model of brand strength formation	141
6.3. Antecedents of brand strength	144
6.4. A situative approach to assess the impact of experiential information on brand strength formation	151
7. Empirical design	155
7.1. Approach and objectives of the study	155
7.2. Operational definition of variables	155
7.2.1. Operational definition of brand strength	156
7.2.2. Operational definition of experiential information/experience	158
7.3. Empirical model and research hypotheses	160
7.4. Research method	164
7.4.1. Structure of the sample	165
7.4.2. Survey instrument	166
7.4.3. Procedure	171
7.4.4. Analysis	172
7.4.5. Reliability and validity of measures	173
7.4.6. Methods of analysis	177
8. Empirical findings	180
8.1. Hypothesis testing	182
8.1.1. The influence of experiential information on brand strength	182
8.1.2. The influence of brand experience on brand accessibility	186
8.1.3. The influence of experiential information on share-of-purchase	187
8.1.4. The influence of share-of-purchase on brand strength	188
8.1.5. The influence of share-of-purchase on brand accessibility	189
8.1.6. The influence of brand accessibility on brand strength	190
8.1.7. The Influence of specific competitive situations on brand strength	191
8.1.8. The moderating effect of brand experience on the impact of competitive situations on brand strength	193

8.2. Testing the causal model of brand strength formation	195
8.2.2. Testing the causal model of brand strength formation in competitive situation 2	200
8.2.3. Testing the causal model of brand strength formation in competitive situation 5	202
8.2.4. Testing the causal model of brand strength formation in competitive situation 6	203
8.3. Summary and discussion of findings	204
8.4. Limitations	209
9. Conclusions	211
9.1. Contribution	211
9.2. Implications for further research and brand management	216
References	221
Appendix	241