

SOCIAL HOUSING A European Dilemma?

Peter Emms

CONTENTS

Preface		x
Foreword		xii
Introduction		1
	The common origins of social rented housing	1
	How the United Kingdom developed differently	2
	The development of the social rented sector after the Second World War	4
	Emerging discontent	6
	Progress towards solutions	8
one	The United Kingdom	10
	I The general background	10
	Population and housing stock	10
	Tenure	11
	Conditions	13
	Household and dwelling balance	14
	II History of the social rented sector	14
	III The landlord organisations	20
	Local authorities	21
	Relationships within local authorities	21
	Relationships with central government	22
	Relationships between local authorities	23
	The Institute of Housing	24
	Housing associations	24
	Home ownership	25
	IV Finance	25
	Rent pooling	26
	Changes in rent levels	27
	Local authority subsidy arrangements in the 1980s	28
	Housing association subsidies	29

vi Contents

	The shift towards personal subsidies	31
	The trend from new-build to renovation	32
V	The buildings	33
VI	The tenants	39
VII	Management problems and solutions	50
	Symptoms and causes of decline	50
	The Priority Estates Project	54
	Estate Action	55
	Other government initiatives	57
	Notes	60
two	France	61
I	The general background	61
	Population and housing stock	61
	Tenure	62
	Conditions and housing balance	64
II	History of the social rented sector	65
III	The landlord organisations	69
	Structure and size	69
	Building for sale	73
	The market for HLM housing	73
	Allocations	74
	Relations with central government	75
	Relationships with the municipalities	77
	Relationships within the HLM movement	78
IV	Finance	79
	Overall expenditure	80
	Bricks and mortar subsidies	81
	Housing benefits	84
V	The buildings	86
VI	The tenants	90
VII	Management problems and solutions	98
	Extent of the problems	98

	The National Commission	99
	Evaluation	109
	Notes	111
three	The Federal Republic of Germany	113
I	The general background	113
	Population and housing stock	113
	Post-war history	115
	Tenure	117
	The housing market	121
	Conditions	122
II	History of the social rented sector	122
III	The landlord organisations	126
	Non-profit landlord organisations	127
	Cooperatives	128
	Companies	129
	Relationships	130
	The collapse of Neue Heimat	133
	Education and training	134
IV	Finance	134
	Bricks and mortar subsidies	135
	The shift from new-build to maintenance and renovation	138
	Housing benefits	140
V	The buildings	142
VI	The tenants	147
VII	Management problems and solutions	153
	Physical problems	153
	Management, social and economic issues	154
	Government programmes	157
	Conclusions	183
	Notes	185

viii Contents

four	The Netherlands	187
	I The general background	187
	Population and housing stock	187
	Standards of amenity	189
	Tenure	190
	Household and dwelling balance	193
	II History of the social rented sector	194
	III The landlord organisations	197
	Housing associations	197
	Municipal landlords	198
	Relationships	199
	IV Finance in the social rented sector	202
	Bricks and mortar subsidies	202
	Housing benefits	207
	Income and expenditure of housing associations	209
	V The buildings	210
	VI The tenants	215
	VII Management problems and solutions	218
	Problem estate initiatives	218
	Conclusion	232
	Notes	233
five	The Soviet Union	234
	I The general background	234
	Population and housing stock	234
	Urbanisation and industrialisation	235
	Tenure	237
	II The history of the social rented sector	241
	Urban housing before the Revolution	241
	From the Revolution to the end of the Second World War	243
	The post-war period	245
	III The landlord organisations	249

Municipalities	250
Employers	256
House-building cooperatives	258
The role of central government	260
IV Finance	261
Capital provision	261
Income and expenditure	265
V The buildings	269
Age profile and condition	269
Size	273
Amenities	276
VI The tenants	277
Demographic trends	278
Social disadvantage	279
Social stratification and tenure	281
House-building cooperatives	282
Rural housing	283
Tenants' attitudes	283
VII Management problems and solutions	284
Preferences, pressures and causes of unpopularity	285
Indicators of management problems	288
Towards a solution of the housing problem	289
Notes	296
 conclusion	 301
Historical divergences	301
Differences in management approach	302
Financial differences	304
Priorities on problem estates	305
Differing approaches to problem estates	306
Governments at the crossroads	308
Final thoughts	311
 Index	 313