

An Outline of Japanese Economic History 1603-1940

Major Works and Research Findings

Edited by

Mikio Sumiya Koji Taira

UNIVERSITY OF TOKYO PRESS

Contents

Foreword by Bert F. Hoselitz	vii
Preface	ix
Introduction: The Ebbs and Flows in Historical Research	3
 Part I: Feudal Japan (1603–1867)
Introduction to Part I	19
1. The Baku-Han System	22
2. Money and Currency	38
Appendix: Money and Social Class	53
3. Commerce and Merchants	56
Appendix: Merchants' Profits	77
4. Money Changers and Moneylenders	79
5. Peasants and Villages	93
6. The Tenpō Reform: A Prelude to the Meiji Restoration?	112
7. The Organization of Premodern Industry	130
Appendix: The Concept of the "Manufacture"	149
8. Changes and Conflicts in Class Relations	152
9. International Relations and the End of Tokugawa Japan	169
 Part II: Absolutism and Capitalism (1868–1940)
Introduction to Part II	187
10. The Role of the State in Economic Development	191
11. Industrial Legislation	211
12. Education	226
13. Money and Banking	242
14. Meiji Entrepreneurs and Managers	254
15. The Formation of Industrial Capital	269
Appendix: A Further Note on "Manufacture"	284

16. The Feudal Legacy in Agriculture	287
Appendix: "Parasitic Landlordism"	306
17. International Trade and Export Industries	310
18. Small and Medium Enterprises	324
19. Labor Markets and Social Movements	337
Appendix: The Origins of Modern Japanese Pacifism	356
Appendix A: Consultants for the Project on Japanese
Economic History	360
Index	361