

OECD Employment Outlook

BOOSTING JOBS AND INCOMES

2006

Technische Universität Darmstadt

Inv. Nr. 19854

12006

Institut für Berufspädagogik

Bibliothek für Berufspädagogik
TU Darmstadt

59151860

ORGANISATION FOR ECONOMIC CO-OPERATION AND DEVELOPMENT

Table of Contents

Editorial – Boosting Jobs and Incomes	11
Chapter 1. Short-term Labour Market Prospects and Introduction to the OECD Jobs Strategy Reassessment.	15
Introduction	16
1. Recent labour market developments and prospects	16
Economic outlook to the year 2007	16
Employment and unemployment	18
Real compensation	20
2. Reassessing the OECD Jobs Strategy	23
Purpose and scope of the reassessment	23
How this issue of the OECD Employment Outlook contributes to the reassessment of the 1994 Jobs Strategy	27
Chapter 2. Labour Market Performance since 1994 and Future Challenges	29
1. Aggregate labour market performance	30
2. Labour market performance for particular groups	34
3. Trends in income distribution and working conditions since 1994	38
4. The current situation and future challenges	42
Notes	44
Chapter 3. General Policies to Improve Employment Opportunities for All	47
1. Macroeconomic policy and labour market performance	49
1.1. Inflation and monetary policy	49
1.2. Fiscal policy	52
1.3. Coordination of macroeconomic and structural policies	53
2. Impact of welfare systems and labour market programmes on participation and employment	56
2.1. Unemployment benefits and the incentive to find a job	56
2.2. The combined impact of social protection benefits and taxes on labour supply and policies to make work pay	63
2.3. Active labour market programmes and strategies for activating the unemployed	68
2.4. Policy issues related to welfare benefits that typically have not been conditional on availability for work	75
3. Impact of wage-setting, taxes and labour- and product-market regulations on labour demand and employment	80
3.1. Wage-setting institutions and policies	80
3.2. Taxation of labour income	88
3.3. Employment protection legislation	95
3.4. Working-time arrangements	100
3.5. Product market regulations	104

4. Lifelong learning and training policies	107
4.1. The policy challenge	108
4.2. Implications for policy	111
Notes	117
Chapter 4. Policies Targeted at Specific Workforce Groups or Labour Market Segments	127
1. Promoting employment prospects of under-represented groups	128
1.1. Measures to increase participation of women	128
1.2. Measures to increase participation of older people	131
1.3. Promoting employment prospects of youth	136
1.4. Promoting employment prospects of immigrants	142
2. Assisting workers in disadvantaged regions	147
3. Facilitating transitions from informal work to formal employment	152
Notes	155
Chapter 5. Social Implications of Policies Aimed at Raising Employment	157
1. Trends in income inequality and poverty: the link to changes in labour market performance	158
1.1. Income inequality and changes in unemployment and employment	162
1.2. Poverty incidence and persistence over the 1990s: overall and for specific groups	166
1.3. Impact of labour market institutions on household income inequality and poverty	169
1.4. Conclusion	169
2. Implications for job stability and career paths	170
2.1. Temporary jobs: evidence and policy implications	170
2.2. Low-pay incidence: patterns and policy significance	174
Notes	180
Chapter 6. Understanding Policy Interactions and Complementarities, and their Implication for Reform Strategies	183
1. Labour market policies and institutions and the macroeconomic environment	184
1.1. The interaction between macroeconomic shocks and labour market policies and institutions	184
1.2. Labour market reforms improve the macroeconomic and public finance performance	186
2. Policy interactions and packages	190
2.1. Existing policy packages and employment performance	190
2.2. Policy interactions	192
3. Political economy of reforms	194
3.1. Distributional and timing effects	194
3.2. The role of policy design in overcoming adverse distributional and timing effects	196
Notes	200
Annex 6.A1. Principal Component Analysis of Policy Packages and Employment Performance	202

Chapter 7. Reassessing the Role of Policies and Institutions for Labour Market Performance: A Quantitative Analysis	207
Introduction and main findings	208
1. The determinants of structural unemployment	209
1.1. Policies, institutions and unemployment: baseline results	210
1.2. Additional determinants of unemployment patterns: minimum wages, active labour market programmes, and housing policy	216
1.3. Interactions between institutions and shocks	218
2. Group-specific employment rates	220
2.1. Prime-age men and women	221
2.2. Older workers	223
2.3. Younger workers	224
2.4. Summing up policy influences on employment rates	225
Notes	227
Annex 7.A1. Baseline Regression Models	230
Bibliography	233
Statistical Annex	245
List of boxes
Chapter 1
1.1. The 1994 OECD Jobs Strategy	24
1.2. OECD Growth Study: the role of education, innovation and entrepreneurship	25
1.3. OECD Study of Trade and Structural Adjustment and its follow up	26
Chapter 3
3.1. Overall reform effort and economic performance	50
3.2. Monetary policy can bring forward the benefits of structural reforms: an illustration for the euro area	54
3.3. EPL lessons from Austria and the Netherlands	99
Chapter 4
4.1. The reform of vocational education and training in Norway	140
Chapter 5
5.1. Non-wage benefits: an important dimension of job quality contributing to traps	171
Chapter 6
6.1. The macroeconomic and public finance impact of labour market reforms: a review of selected studies	188
6.2. The quality of industrial relations and the political feasibility of structural reforms: selected examples of Denmark, Ireland and the Netherlands	197
6.3. Reforming at the margin to pave the way for further policy changes: the EPL reforms in Portugal and Spain	198