

Industrial New Product Development

A Manual for the 1980s

uder
J. W. Carson and T. Rickards

TECHNISCHE HOCHSCHULE DARMSTADT
Fachbereich 1
Gesamtbibliothek
Betriebswirtschaftslehre
Inventar-Nr. :	34.134
Abteil-Nr. :	A.31/152
Sachgebiete:	1.8.2
	0026.9865

Gower

Contents

Preface	ix
Acknowledgements	xi
PART I INTRODUCTION
Chapter 1 New-Product Development in the 1980s	3
1.1 Introduction	3
1.2 Buying-in strategies for organisational growth	3
1.3 A closer look at the practices of new-product development	4
1.4 A strategy for integrated new-product venturing	5
1.5 Summary	6
Chapter 2 Overview of SCIMITAR: A Weapon for New-Product Development	7
2.1 What is SCIMITAR?	7
2.2 The three stages of SCIMITAR	9
2.3 Organising the SCIMITAR system of new-product development	12
2.4 Summary	12
PART II SCIMITAR: A SYSTEMATIC APPROACH TO NEW-PRODUCT DEVELOPMENT
Chapter 3 Three-Dimensional Modelling of Business Activities	15
3.1 Introduction to modelling	15
3.2 Modelling the business environment	16
3.3 Practicalities of SCIMITAR modelling	19
3.4 Case example	23
3.5 Summary	24
Chapter 4 The Establishment of Corporate Entrepreneurial Groups	25
4.1 Introduction	25
4.2 Starting up a new-product group	25
4.3 From board commitment to project initiation	26
4.4 Appointment of a new-product manager	26

4.5	Terms of reference for the new-product group	27
4.6	Case examples	31
4.7	Summary	32
Chapter 5 Industrial Search Processes		33
5.1	Introduction	33
5.2	Attribute listing	33
5.3	Industrial data researching	35
5.4	Needs research	37
5.5	Technocommercial forecasting	39
5.6	Case examples	42
5.7	Summary	44
Chapter 6 Locating New-Product Ideas		45
6.1	Introduction	45
6.2	Business unit projection	45
6.3	Attribute listing in a creative problem-solving team	46
6.4	The insight-seeking approach ('creative problem-solving techniques')	50
6.5	Case examples	53
6.6	Summary	58
Chapter 7 Administration of the New-Product Search Stage		60
7.1	Introduction	60
7.2	Processing data from industry searches	60
7.3	Reporting the search stage	61
7.4	The capital proposal: not a begging bowl but a business opportunity	65
7.5	Administering the human problems	67
7.6	Case examples	67
7.7	Summary	68
INTERFACE		71
Chapter 8 Initial Experimentation		75
8.1	Introduction	75
8.2	Standardisation of ideas	75
8.3	Project filtering	76
8.4	Project targeting	78
8.5	Practical details of initial experimentation	79
8.6	Case example	80
8.7	Summary	81
Chapter 9 Initial Commercialisation		82
9.1	Introduction	82
9.2	Preparation	82
9.3	Customer interviews	86
9.4	Follow-up	87
9.5	Case examples	87
9.6	Summary	88
Chapter 10 Product Development and Optimisation		90
10.1	Introduction	90
10.2	The basis of experimental design	90
10.3	Factorial designs in mapping and searching activities	91
10.4	Analysis of results	94
10.5	Other development information required	94

10.6 Case example: graphical methods in factorial analysis	96
10.7 Summary	97
Chapter 11 Management of the New-Product Development Phase: Administrative and Interface Issues	98
11.1 Introduction	98
11.2 Administration and recording of experimental work	98
11.3 Administration and recording of initial commercialisation	99
11.4 Venture selection	99
11.5 Gaining corporate acceptance for venture proposals	100
11.6 Case examples	103
11.7 Summary	107
INTERFACE	109
Chapter 12 Prelaunch Activities	113
12.1 Introduction	113
12.2 Integrated venturing	113
12.3 Small scale production	114
12.4 Customer trials	115
12.5 Case examples	118
12.6 Summary	121
Chapter 13 The New-Product Launch	122
13.1 Introduction	122
13.2 Industrial launches: a low-cost approach	122
13.3 Pricing policy	123
13.4 Preparing technical data and samples	124
13.5 Advertising	125
13.6 From enquiries into orders	125
13.7 The psychology of entering a new market	126
13.8 Case examples	128
13.9 Summary	129
Chapter 14 Commercial Development	130
14.1 Introduction	130
14.2 Spreading the net	130
14.3 Dealing with problems	132
14.4 Technical service	134
14.5 Case examples	136
14.6 Summary	137
Chapter 15 New-Product Transfer	138
15.1 Introduction	138
15.2 Planning the new-product transfer	138
15.3 Practicalities and problem-avoidance during project transfer	141
15.4 Developing a second generation of new products	141
15.5 Case examples	142
15.6 Summary	143
OVERVIEW	145
PART III CONCLUSIONS
Chapter 16 Conclusions	149
16.1 Introduction	149

16.2 SCIMITAR revisited	149
16.3 How generalisable is SCIMITAR?	151
16.4 How relevant is SCIMITAR to the 1980s?	151
16.5 How feasible is SCIMITAR?	153
16.6 Summary	153
Appendix 1 Bibliography	155
Appendix 2 Information Handling Resources for the New- Product Manager	159
Index	163