

THE MANAGEMENT CONTROL PROCESS

ROBERT J. MOCKLER

St. John's University

APPLETON-CENTURY-CROFTS

Educational Division

New York

MEREDITH CORPORATION

CONTENTS

---

PREFACE	viii
CHAPTER 1—THE CONCEPT OF MANAGEMENT CONTROL	1
The Definition of Management Control	2
Various Levels and Kinds of Management Control	4
Management Control and the Other Management Functions	7
Management Control and New Technology	9
The Viewpoint of Management Control	10
Conclusion	11
CHAPTER 2—THE STEPS IN THE MANAGEMENT CONTROL PROCESS	13
The Basic Problem-Solving/Decision-Making Process	14
The Management Control Process	17
The Complexities of the Control Process at Work	18
Conclusion: The Control Process as an Integrating Force	21
CHAPTER 3—STEP ONE: DEFINING THE CONTROL SITUATION AND DEVELOPING AN APPROACH TO IT	24
Diagnosing the Situation	24
The Nature of the Control Situation and Problem	25
The Objective and Scope of the Control Effort	26
Developing an Approach	27
Organization of the Control Effort	33
Breaking the Accounting and Finance Mold in Organizing for Control	37
Conclusion	41

CHAPTER 4—STEP TWO: IDENTIFYING KEY FACTORS AFFECTING THE CONTROL SITUATION—PLANNING CONSIDERATIONS	44
Management Control and the Planning Process	44
External Planning Premises: Developing Meaningful Information about the Environment	45
Economic and Market Forecasts and Forecasting Techniques	51
A Study in Market and Sales Forecasting	57
How Accurate Should Forecasts Be?	59
Company Planning Premises	60
The Sales Forecast and Control Standards	62
Overall Planning Directions: Objectives and Policies	64
Implementation Planning Factors	65
Conclusion	65
CHAPTER 5—STEP TWO: IDENTIFYING KEY FACTORS AFFECTING THE CONTROL SITUATION—OTHER CONSIDERATIONS	67
Specific Characteristics of the Control Situation	67
The Purpose of the Control Tools and Systems	71
The Nature of the Control Tools and Systems	72
The Nature of Control Standards	74
Identifying Critical Control Areas and Indicators	76
Special Factors Affecting Control Action	79
Conclusion	81
CHAPTER 6—STEP THREE: DEVELOPING CONTROL TOOLS AND SYSTEMS	83
The Varying Complexity and Importance of this Step	83
Control Tools and Systems	85
Developing Alternatives	86
Evaluating Alternatives	91
Implementing the Tool or System	92
Conclusion	92
CHAPTER 7—STEP THREE: ACCOUNTING AND FINANCE CONTROLS	95
The Basic Accounting Function	95
Basic Accounting Reports	98
Comparative Accounting and Control Reports	103
Budgetary Control	105
Budgets and People	111

The Nature of Costs	113
Cost Accounting	114
Responsibility Accounting	117
The Basic Finance Function	118
Cash Flow Statements	120
Financial Analysis Through Financial Ratios	121
Capital Budgeting	125
Return on Investment Analysis	128
Conclusion	132
CHAPTER 8—STEP THREE: OPERATING AND STAFF CONTROLS	135
Marketing	135
Manufacturing	147
Personnel	161
Overall Corporate Control and Operating and Staff Control	168
Conclusion	171
CHAPTER 9—STEP THREE: GRAPHIC AND MATHEMATICAL TOOLS USED IN MANAGEMENT CONTROL	174
The Basic Approach: Model Building and Simulation	174
Graphic Control Tools	176
Mathematical Tools	182
Conclusion	192
CHAPTER 10—STEP THREE: INFORMATION PROCESSING SYSTEMS USED FOR MANAGEMENT CONTROL	194
Data Processing Systems and Management Control	194
Data Processing Systems: Some Basic Definitions	196
Electronic Data Processing Systems Applications in Management Control	201
The Systems Approach and Business Organization for Control Decision Making	208
Developing a New Information System for Control: Guidelines for Overcoming Some Typical Problems	214
Conclusion	223
CHAPTER 11—STEP FOUR IN THE MANAGEMENT CONTROL PROCESS: EXERCISING CONTROL	227
The Basic Concept and Process	227
Underlying Principles	230

Effectively Introducing and Using a New Corporate Control System	232
Providing Comparative Financial Analysis for Planning Decisions	235
Determining the Causes of Deviations at the Operating Level	237
Taking Control Action	240
The Behavioral Sciences and Management Control	241
Judgment, Creativity, and Management Control	250
Conclusion	251
CHAPTER 12—STEP FIVE: CONTROL REPORTING	255
The Various Kinds of Control Reports	255
Preparing Control Reports
Factors Affecting Control Reporting	256
Some General Guidelines	267
The Management Control Viewpoint	270
Conclusion	271
CHAPTER 13—A CORPORATE FINANCIAL CONTROL SYSTEM	272
The Planning Base	272
Developing Budgets and Standards	275
The Control System: Overall Comparative Financial Result Reports	278
The Control System: Operating Controls Related to the Overall Financial Control System	286
The Control System: Other Operating Controls	291
The Control System: Personnel Controls	295
The Control System: Capital Budgeting	296
Top Management Use of the Control System	297
Evaluation of the Control System	299
Conclusion	302
CHAPTER 14—PUTTING THE CONTROL PROCESS TO WORK IN AN OPERATING SITUATION	305
Defining the Control Situation and Developing an Approach to It	306
Identifying Key Planning Factors	307
Developing an Operating Control System	310
Integrating Internal Operating Controls with Overall Corporate Controls	317
The Exercise of Control	320
Conclusion	324

CHAPTER 15—CONCLUSION	327
The Management Control Process: A Summary of the Study	327
Controlling the Corporate Controller	330
The History of the Study of Management Control	331
Building a Unified Science of Management Control	345
LIST OF BOOKS CITED	347
INDEX	355