

Embargo Disimplemented

South Africa's Military Industry

SIGNE LANDGREN

sipri

Stockholm International Peace Research Institute

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS

1989

Contents

List of tables and figures	xi
----------------------------	----

Acronyms and Abbreviations	xii
----------------------------	-----

Part I. Introduction

Chapter 1. South Africa as a case study

I. Purpose of the project	3
II. The arms embargo method	4
III. The military industrialization process	12
Notes and references	19

Chapter 2. Historical impediments to embargo implementation

I. Introduction	21
II. Resource factors	21
III. Political factors	27
Notes and references	32

Part II. The development of South Africa's military industry

Chapter 3. The historical background

I. Introduction	37
II. 1912-39	37
III. 1939-45	37
IV. 1945-61	38
Notes and references	40

Chapter 4. The organization and structure of the modern arms industry

I. Introduction	41
II. Reorganizing the institutional structure	42
III. The Armaments Board	44
IV. Armscor	45
Notes and references	58

Part III. The sectors of the military industry

Chapter 5. The aircraft industry

I.	Introduction	63
II.	Establishment of the Atlas Aircraft Corporation	65
III.	The Atlas Impala programme	66
IV.	The Atlas Bosbok and Kudu programme	69
V.	Atlas-Mirage-3/F-1	70
VI.	Atlas 'Cheetah'—the 'new' fighter design	73
VII.	Spare parts and engines	77
VIII.	Other aircraft producers	78
	Notes and references	78

Chapter 6. The armoured vehicle industry

I.	Introduction	81
II.	Armoured cars	82
III.	Tanks	85
IV.	Field artillery	87
V.	Army trucks and specialized versions	95
VI.	Engines	99
	Notes and references	100

Chapter 7. The missile industry

I.	Introduction	103
II.	Missile projects	105
	Notes and references	111

Chapter 8. The warship industry

I.	Introduction	113
II.	Projects	117
	Notes and references	122

Chapter 9. Infantry weapons and small arms

I.	Introduction	124
II.	The producers	124
III.	Ammunition and explosives	126
IV.	Small arms	129
	Notes and references	134

Chapter 10. Military electronics and communications equipment

I.	Introduction	135
II.	From investment to disinvestment	137
III.	South African producers	140
IV.	Electronic products	144
	Notes and references	147

Chapter 11. The CBW industry

I. Introduction	149
II. Chemical weapons	149
III. Bacteriological weapons	150
Notes and references	151

Chapter 12. Nuclear technology

I. Introduction	153
II. The nuclear research programme	155
III. The Ucor uranium enrichment process	158
IV. The nuclear energy programme	160
V. A 'nuclear Frankenstein in Africa'?	162
Notes and references	171

Chapter 13. South Africa's arms exports

I. Introduction	173
II. The flow	175
III. Armscor's sales organization	182
Notes and references	186

Part IV. Implementation and disimplementationChapter 14. Embargo implementation

I. Introduction	191
II. The UK	194
III. The United States	201
IV. France	207
V. FR Germany	212
VI. Italy	215
VII. Japan	216
VIII. The Third World arms producers	217
Notes and references	227

Chapter 15. Summary and conclusions

I. Introduction	229
II. The methods of disimplementation	231
III. The motives for disimplementation	238
IV. Final assessment	240
Notes and references	241

Appendices

Appendix 1. Sources and methods

I. International sources of information	242
II. South African sources	242
III. Implementation analysis	243
IV. Terminology	244
Notes and references	246

Appendix 2. UN Security Council resolutions on the arms embargo against South Africa

I. Resolution 181 (1963) of 7 August 1963 (voluntary)	248
II. Resolution 182 (1963) of 4 December 1963 (voluntary)	249
III. Resolution 418 (1977) of 4 November 1977 (mandatory)	250
IV. Resolution 558 (1984) of 13 December 1984 (voluntary)	252

Appendix 3. Selected bibliography

I. Books	253
II. Special reports	255
III. South African official reports	258
IV. Yearbooks	258
V. UN documents	259

Appendix 4. South Africa's major weapons industry: the dependence on foreign military technology

261