

Institut für Lateinamerikaforschung und Entwicklungszusammenarbeit
an der Hochschule St.Gallen für Wirtschafts- und Sozialwissenschaften
Buchreihe Band 22

Chris Tanner

Venezuelan Migration

An Analysis of Problems Migration Creates in Developing Countries
Arguments and Proposals for an Active Migration Policy
Postulating a Migration Policy-Making Model

Verlag Rüegger

	Page
TABLE OF CONTENTS	I
INDEX OF FIGURES	VI
INDEX OF TABLES	VIII
INDEX OF MAPS	X
INDEX OF ABBREVIATIONS	XI
INTRODUCTION AND ACKNOWLEDGMENTS	XIV
I. RECOGNIZING THE PROBLEM	1
1. Theories of migration	2
1.1 Traditional theories of migration	2
1.2 Operational migration theories	6
1.2.1 Labor supply and wages	8
1.2.2 Capital supply and technology level	9
1.2.3 Todaro's migration model	13
2. The economy of migration	23
2.1 Equilibrated growth and migration	25
2.2 A disequilibrated economy through migration	27
2.3 Proposal for an individual approach	33
3. The economy of migration in developing countries	37
3.1 Pre-migration output	37
3.1.1 Agricultural output	38
3.2 Post-migrational output and costs	43
3.2.1 Costs- and output per capita in relation to city size	45
3.2.1.1 Costs	45
3.2.1.2 Costs and output	49
3.2.2 Migration and city-size	52

	Page
II. ANALYZING THE PROBLEM	60
1. Pre-colombian settlement structure	60
2. Colonial settlement structure	62
2.1 The Spanish conquest and its typical settlement pattern	62
2.2 Indian settlement patterns during colonialization	64
2.3 The colonial economy and its effect on settlement patterns	66
2.3.1 The cattle economy	67
2.3.2 The cacao economy	69
2.4 Republican settlement structure (from 1811 - 1900)	71
2.4.1 The wars of independence	71
2.4.2 The federal war	75
2.4.3 Republican agriculture	76
2.4.4 New settlements	80
2.4.5 Natural catastrophes	81
2.4.6 A summary of changes in Venezuela's pre-industrial (1498 - 1900) geographic population structures	82
2.5 Changes in Venezuela's geographic population structure after 1900	85
3. 20th century settlement structure	85
3.1 Petroleum and its effects on the geographic population structure	85
3.1.1 The production process	87
3.1.2 The refining process	88
3.2 The manufacturing industry and its effect on the geographic population structure	94
3.2.1 The textile industry	97
3.2.2 Brewing-industry	99
3.2.3 The food industry	101

	Page
3.3 Agriculture and its effect on geographic population structure	103
3.3.1 The agrarian reform	106
3.3.2 Agricultural production	111
3.4 Venezuelan population growth	113
3.4.1 Causes for the growth of Venezuelan population	115
3.4.2 Statistical analysis of Venezuelan rural to urban migration	118
3.4.2.1 Rural to urban and intermediate to urban migration	124
3.4.2.2 The gross-migration concept	126
3.4.3 Projections of the population of Venezuela	135
3.4.3.1 Rural to urban migration	138
3.4.3.2 Urban to urban migration	141
3.4.3.3 Projections of total migration	144
4. Conclusions	146
III. SOLVING THE PROBLEM, SOME SUGGESTIONS	149
1. A decision-making model for active migration policies	150
1.1 The postulate of a migration policy-making model	154
1.2 The structure of the migration policy-making model	155
1.2.1 The dimensions of the migration policy-making model	157
1.2.1.1 Interlocking the dimensions	158
1.2.1.2 Elements of control, reaction, and adaption	160
1.2.2 The decision makers	163

	Page
2. The operational aspects of the model; a concretion	165
2.1 The strategy: Finding universal, strategical elements, breaking the vicious circle	166
2.1.1 The strategic elements of the natural sphere	175
2.1.1.1 Policy-relevant locations	178
2.1.2 The strategic elements of the social sphere	180
2.1.2.1 Individual motivation	183
2.1.2.1.1 Considering motivational elements in migration policies for developing countries	187
2.1.2.2 Social groups	190
2.1.2.2.1 Elements of disintegration	194
2.1.2.2.2 Migration policy relevant groups	195
2.1.2.2.3 The agents of change	196
2.1.2.3 A location's social tensions	199
2.1.3 The strategic elements of the economic sphere	204
2.1.3.1 Economic theories of location	205
2.1.3.2 The choice of location	207
2.1.3.2.1 The choice of location by commercial companies	208
2.1.3.3 Cost-output-manpower relations	213
2.1.3.4 Consequences for an efficient migration policy	218

	Page
2.1.4 The political sphere	223
2.1.4.1 The omnipresence of delimitations and assignments	224
2.1.4.2 Formal and factual delimitations and assignments	225
2.1.4.3 A migrant relevant system of political articulation	226
2.1.4.4 Loosening the dependancies	227
2.2 The communication process	229
2.2.1 The selection process	232
2.2.2 Personal or impersonal communication	235
3. Summary and Conclusions	239
3.1 The evolution in the object of migration theory	239
3.2 The evolution in the subjects of migration theory	241
3.3 The requirements migration theory must fulfill	244
3.3.1 The scientific requirements migration theory must fulfill	244
3.3.2 The practical requirements migration theory must fulfill	245
3.4 Our contribution to migration theory	245
3.4.1 Scientific contributions to migration theory	246
3.4.2 Practical contributions to migration theory	253
3.5 Unsolved problems and suggestions on how to proceed	255