

EASTERN EUROPE AND THE SOVIET UNION IN THE WORLD ECONOMY

Susan M. Collins and Dani Rodrik

INSTITUTE FOR INTERNATIONAL ECONOMICS
WASHINGTON, DC
May 1991

Contents

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS page ix

PREFACE C. Fred Bergsten page xi

1 INTRODUCTION, OVERVIEW, AND A ROAD MAP page 1

How "Big" Are Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union? page 4

The Transition in Individual Economies page 13

A Road Map and Some Conclusions page 24

 2 CONSEQUENCES FOR INTERNATIONAL TRADE page 27

Volume of Trade page 29

Direction of Trade page 36

Product Composition of Trade page 50

Recent Developments in Polish and Hungarian Trade page 61

Conclusions page 66

3 CONSEQUENCES FOR CAPITAL FLOWS AND
MACROECONOMIC PERFORMANCE page 69

A Framework for Analysis page 71

Estimates of Capital Flows to Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union page 75

Investment, Saving, and Interest Rates: Econometric Evidence page 91

Macroeconomic and Regional Implications page 98

Conclusions page 107

4 CONCLUSIONS AND POLICY IMPLICATIONS page 111

Trade Implications page 112

Macroeconomic Implications page 116

Policy Dilemmas page 123

APPENDICES

A Estimation of the Geographical Composition of Trade of Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union page 125

- B Aggregate Demand Effects of Asymmetric Import Demand from Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union page 137
- C Private-Sector Investment in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union: Survey Results page 141