PROLOGUE	13
PREFACE	15
I. INTRODUCTION: NEW FORMS OF WORK	19
Some features of the new forms of work	19
The scale and impenetrability of the new forms	22
The hundred faces of the new forms of work	24
The gender of the new forms	26
Legal regulations vary from one country to another	27
The dichotomy: hard-core workers and peripheral workers	27
The question is not "flexibility", but lack of security	28
Forms of work are changing in line with company interests	30
The confusion caused for labour and social security law	31
New forms of work: the future before them	33
Questions to which an answer will be sought	34
II. NEW FORMS OF WORK WITH OR WITHOUT EMPLOYMENT CONTRACTS	36
An attempt at classification: towards a new typology of employment contracts	36
The employer with no jobs	39
— The fixed-term employment contract	39
The Federal Republic of Germany	40
France	41
Italy	42
Portugal	43

Spain	44
Greece	45
The Netherlands	46
— Part-time working	46
Recognition and generalisation following legislative action	46
The path of collective bargaining	47
• The Federal Republic of Germany	47
• Spain	48
• France	49
• Italy	50
• United Kingdom	51
• Denmark	52
• Netherlands	52
Special cases: Greece and Portugal	53
• Greece: sought by government and industrialists; rejected by unions	53
• Portugal: unknown in its modern form	54
Other forms of part-time working: job-sharing, a full-time job divided between two or more workers	55
• Job-sharing in Germany	56
• Job-sharing to create part-time jobs for the unemployed	56
— Temporary employment	59
Contracts with several employers: the expansion of “triangular” relationships	59
Regulated and monitored temporary employment: The Federal Republic of Germany, France, Belgium, the Netherlands	61
• The Federal Republic of Germany	61
• France: after hesitating, legislators opt for full recognition	63
• Belgium: perpetuating “experimental and provisional” regulations	65
• Netherlands: the legal status of the temporary worker is not clearly defined	66
• United Kingdom: permitted by law; many different versions; ill-defined status	67
Spain, Greece, Italy, Portugal: ban on temporary employment companies, and illegal practices	68
• Portugal: old practices and new practices without regulation	68
• Spain: temporary employment companies are prohibited	69
• Italy and Greece: illegal practices	69

— Apprenticeship contracts, employment/training contracts	70
Contracts to promote youth employment	70
France	70
Italy	71
Spain	72
Portugal	72
Belgium	73
— Hybrid and innovative forms:
KAPOVAZ and intermittent working	74
Regulation of flexible working: KAPOVAZ	74
“Labour on call”: some problems	75
Home-based work and teleworking, “floating forms”: the criterion of subordination may disappear	76
— Introduction: two distinct forms of work sharing common features	76
— Home-based work: reappearing in strength, without being tied to new technology	76
The Federal Republic of Germany	77
Belgium	77
Spain	78
Italy	79
United Kingdom	80
Netherlands	81
Portugal	81
Greece	82
Denmark	82
— Incomplete legal status; slide towards self-employed status	83
— Telework: moving into all areas, it has not yet been addressed by specific regulations	84
— Special regulations	86
Employment without an employer	87
— Modern techniques for hiding the employer	87
— The new self-employed	88
— Problems of subcontracting	89
— Moonlighting — clandestine work	90

III. THE EFFECTS OF THE NEW FORMS OF WORK ON LABOUR LAW

92

Labour law in member countries faced with the new forms of work

92

Hesitations

94

A kind of employment law is being formed which implies action on the part of the public authorities

95

The consequences for individual employment relationships

96

— The rights of salaried workers in the light of new forms of work

96

Protection against dismissal

97

Remuneration

100

Paid holidays, educational leave

101

— The effects on the employment contract

102

The employment contract no longer has a monopoly on recruitment

102

*The employment contract is becoming differentiated: not one,
but several contracts*

103

The agreement of a contract becomes surrounded by formal requirements

103

Formality: the revaluation of the individual contract

104

*Execution of non-permanent contracts:
dealing with suspension and seniority*

105

At the end of a non-permanent employment contract: tendency to grant certain rights envisaged for typical workers

105

The question of accumulated contracts

106

— A new function of the contract and the question of subordination

107

A new function of the employment contract, through the employment/training contract

107

The employment contract which calls into question the traditional concept of subordination

108

Effects on collective work relationships

109

— Collective rights under the new forms of employment

109

— National regulations

110

— Collective rights and teleworkers: perspectives

113

IV. THE EFFECTS OF THE NEW FORMS OF WORK ON SOCIAL SECURITY LAW	115
<hr/>
The new forms in social security law: badly integrated	115
Unemployment insurance: calculated on the basis of former earnings, it is not suited to atypical employment	117
Other social benefits	121
— Illness and maternity	122
— Occupational accidents	125
— Family allowances	126
— Pensions: pensions for workers under new forms of employment contract are not guaranteed — apart from the social security pension	127
Complementary systems generally exclude workers under new forms of employment: steps towards extending them	128
Affiliation and contribution conditions for the workers involved: the source of inferiority and inequality	129
The protection given by social security to workers under new forms of employment is inadequate	129
Public authorities favour certain new forms of work by exempting a company from its social contributions	131
A large number of workers under new forms are bordering on, or indeed joining the “new poor”	132
The need: social security law should adjust its parameters to the new social risks: life “without much work” or chronic unemployment	133

V. THE USE OF COLLECTIVE BARGAINING: NEW PERSPECTIVES AND LIMITATIONS	138
Traditional channels and new channels	139
The problem of the hierarchy of sources	142
A new stage	144
