

ROBERTSONIAN ECONOMICS

An Examination of the Work of Sir D. H. Robertson on Industrial Fluctuation

John R. Presley, B.A., Ph.D.

M

Contents

Preface	ix
Introduction	1
PART I — THE THEORY OF INDUSTRIAL FLUCTUATION
1 Background to a Study of Industrial Fluctuation in 1915	9
2 The Nature of the Industrial Fluctuation and the Robertsonian Methodological Approach	18
3 The Robertsonian Theory of Industrial Fluctuation — An Outline	23
4 The Causes of the Upturn	32
5 The Theory of Crisis — From Boom to Recession	47
6 Agricultural Forces in the Trade Cycle	52
7 Robertson and the Alternative Theories of Industrial Fluctuation	59
PART II — SAVING AND INVESTMENT IN THE TRADE CYCLE
1 Introduction	73
2 Background to the Robertson–Keynes Debate	75
3 Saving in the Cycle: The Robertsonian Approach in the Study	92
	vii

4	Robertson on Saving (1918–40)	97
5	Critical Comment on the Forced Saving Thesis	117
6	Saving in the Cycle	121
7	The Robertsonian Theory of Interest	132
8	Origins of the Robertsonian Approach to the Theory of Interest	148
9	Natural and Market Rates of Interest and the Trade Cycle	152
10	Saving, Investment and the Multiplier (1936 and after)	165
11	Robertson and the Liquidity Preference Theory of Interest	177
12	Loanable Funds Versus Liquidity Preference — The Hicks-Hansen Framework	186
13	Some Observations upon the Similarity of Keynes' and Robertson's Work	216
14	The Value of Money	222
PART III — THEORY AND POLICY — SOME CONCLUSIONS
1	Economic Policy and the Trade Cycle	239
2	Robertson and the Price Level	255
	Notes	263
	Bibliography of the Writings of Dennis Holme Robertson	310
	Index	316