

Public Capital Expenditure in OECD Countries

The Causes and Impact of the Decline in Public Capital Spending

Jan-Egbert Sturm

*University of Groningen
The Netherlands*

Edward Elgar

Cheltenham, UK • Northampton, MA, USA

Contents

List of Tables	vii
List of Figures	ix
Acknowledgements	xi
1. Introduction	1
1.1 Introduction	1
1.2 Explaining the decline	2
1.3 Impact	4
1.4 Outline	4
PART ONE: DEVELOPMENT	7
2. Public Capital Spending in the Netherlands	9
2.1 Introduction	9
2.2 Development	10
2.3 Hypotheses	13
2.4 Causality analysis	16
2.5 Conclusions	26
3. Public Capital Spending in the OECD	29
3.1 Introduction	29
3.2 Development	31
3.3 Previous studies	32
3.4 Hypotheses and variables	35
3.5 Estimation results	37
3.6 Concluding comments	41
PART TWO: IMPACT	47
4. Modelling Public Capital Spending and Growth	49
4.1 Introduction	49

4.2	Production function approach	50
4.3	Behavioural approach	57
4.4	VAR approach	65
4.5	Public capital in cross-section models	69
4.6	Public capital in structural models	72
4.7	Conclusions	75
5.	Productivity Effects of Public Capital	81
5.1	Introduction	81
5.2	Theoretical framework	82
5.3	New empirical evidence for the United States	83
5.4	Empirical results for the Netherlands	89
5.5	Conclusions	95
6.	Sectoral Cost Elasticities of Public Infrastructure	97
6.1	Introduction	97
6.2	Theoretical framework	99
6.3	Dutch data	104
6.4	Empirical analysis	107
6.5	Concluding remarks	120
7.	Output Effects of Infrastructure Investment	125
7.1	Introduction	125
7.2	The Netherlands in the 19th century	128
7.3	Data	129
7.4	VAR analysis	133
7.5	Discussion	148
8.	Conclusions	151
8.1	Introduction	151
8.2	Development	152
8.3	Impact	153
8.4	Discussion	156
A.	Stationarity	159
A.1	Introduction	159
A.2	Augmented Dickey–Fuller test	160
A.3	Bootstrapped unit root test	161
A.4	Kwiatkowski et al. test	162
A.5	Leybourne and McCabe test	163
	Bibliography	165
	Author Index	183
	Subject Index	187