

117: 198

BASIC NEEDS IN DEVELOPMENT PLANNING

by
Michael Hopkins and Rolph Van Der Hoeven

A study prepared for the International Labour Office within the framework of the World Employment Programme

TECHNISCHE HOCHSCHULE DARMSTADT
Inv.-Nr.:
4 70 63
WIRTSCHAFTSPOLITIK (VWL II)

Gower

Contents

List of tables	ix
List of figures	xi
List of graphs	xiii
Preface	xv
1 A basic-needs approach to development planning	1
Introduction	1
Why basic needs?	2
What are basic needs?	4
Basic needs as development objectives	4
Basic needs as a methodology	7
Is there a basic-needs strategy?	16
What is new?	23
How could a basic-needs strategy be implemented?	24
Some examples of basic-needs studies	24
Institutional aspects	31
International aspects of basic needs	34
Summary and conclusion	36
2 Basic needs and some relevant aspects of economic theory	37
Introduction	37
Consumption theories and basic needs	39
Characteristics of products	40
External effects	42
Publicly provided goods	44
Subsistence production	46

Income distribution theories and basic needs	47
Theories of income inequality and socio-economic groups	47
Economic power and income distribution	49
Income inequality, equilibrium and basic needs	50
Growth and basic needs	51
Growth theories and maximum investable surplus	54
Growth theories and technical progress	56
Growth theories and capital output ratios	57
Growth theories and demographic aspects	58
Growth, equality and basic needs	59
Trade theory and basic needs	61
Summary and conclusions	63
3 Growth, basic needs and industrialisation	65
Introduction	65
The impact of manufacturing on basic-needs satisfaction	66
The effects of a basic-needs approach on manufacturing	72
Basic needs, industrialisation and international trade	75
Alternative approaches to the Lima target	76
4 Basic needs in the past: An international cross-section analysis	83
Introduction	83
The basic-needs situation in the seventies	85
Progress between 1960 and 1975	87
Explaining basic-needs performance	94
Some cross-international section studies	94
Some hypotheses about basic-needs performance	98
Conclusion	108
5 Basic needs and employment in the future	119
Introduction	119
Methodology	120
Employment and underemployment	127
Discussion of results	132
Summary	134
6 Planning for basic needs	135
Introduction	135
Decentralised planning	135
Basic needs in development plans	136
Basic needs and planning – an example from India	139

Basic needs and planning – an example from Portugal	146
Basic needs and planning – an example from Egypt	154
Conclusion	158
Appendix – Target setting and basic needs	161
Introduction	161
Household size and target income levels	169
List of references to Appendix	175
Index	177