

Robert Z. Lawrence

Regionalism,
Multilateralism, and Deeper Integration

THE BROOKINGS INSTITUTION
Washington, D.C.

Contents

1. Introduction	1
Regional Arrangements: Building Blocks or Stumbling Blocks?	2
Theory and Experience	4
New Features	6
Clarifications	8
2. Globalization and the Demand for Deeper Integration	10
Developed Countries	11
Developing Countries	13
Implications	16
3. The Impact of Regional Arrangements	21
Customs Union and the Theory of the Second Best	22
Implications	24
Deeper Integration and Regional Arrangements	28
4. System Dynamics	34
Market Power	35
Capture	38
Political Support	39
System Rules	40
Customs Unions versus Free Trade Areas	41

5. European Regional Arrangements	43
The Single Market	47
Impact on Outsiders	49
Conclusion	59
6. North America and Beyond	62
Canada-U.S. Free Trade Agreement	62
NAFTA	67
7. Asia and the Pacific	79
Market-Led Integration	80
Support for GATT	82
Skepticism about Regionalism	83
APEC: Four Adjectives in Search of a Noun?	86
Conclusion	93
8. Rules for Preferential Trading Arrangements	95
The GATT Rules	95
Strengthening GATT Rules and Enforcement	104
9. Conclusion	105
Comments	111
Louka T. Katseli	111
Yung Chul Park	119
Appendix	125
References	143
Index	151
Tables
A-1. Selected Regional Trading Arrangements:
General Framework	126
A-2. Selected Regional Trading Arrangements: Reduction of Border Barriers	130

A-3. Selected Regional Trading Arrangements: Remaining Impediments	135
A-4. Selected Regional Trading Arrangements: Moves toward Deeper Integration (Governance)	138
A-5. The Bogor Declaration, November 1994	142