

INDUSTRIAL INCENTIVES

Competition among American
States and Cities

Peter S. Fisher
Alan H. Peters

1998

W.E. Upjohn Institute for Employment Research
Kalamazoo, Michigan

CONTENTS

Acknowledgments	xi
The Authors	xiii
1 State and Local Incentive Competition for New Investment	1
The Expansion of and Justification for State and Local Incentives	5
Criticisms of Incentive Competition	7
Why Economic Development Incentives May Be Useful: Revisionist Research	10
Issue 1: Can Incentives Reasonably Be Expected to Influence Business Location Decisions?	13
The Survey Technique	14
The Case Study Technique	15
The Econometric Technique	15
The General Equilibrium Technique	17
The Hypothetical Firm Technique	18
Conclusions: How We Propose to Deal with the Incentive Question	19
Issue 2: The Spatial Distribution of Incentives	20
Measuring Incentives and the Standing Offer	24
The Structure of the Book	26
Notes	27
2 An Overview of Method	31
What Are Competitive Economic Development Incentives?	31
Taxes and Tax Incentives	33
Corporate Income Tax	35
The Sales Tax	36
The Property Tax	38
Non-Tax Incentives	39
General-Purpose Financing Programs	40
Customized Job Training and Wage Subsidies	40
Infrastructure Subsidies	42
Other Incentive Programs Not Included	43
The Hypothetical Firm Method: An Introduction	45
Extensions to the Hypothetical Firm Method to Include Non-Tax Incentives	49
Selection of the State and City Samples	50
Notes	52

3 The Hypothetical Firm Method Extended	55
Alternative Approaches	56
Aggregate Tax Measures	56
Program Counting	57
Program or Tax Expenditures	58
The Hypothetical Firm Method	58
Which Industries and Firm Sizes?	63
Firm, Plant, and Headquarters Location	70
How Are the Firm's Sales Distributed among States?	72
Interstate or Interlocal Competition?	75
Measuring Effects over Time	78
Disaggregating the Results	82
Simulating the Worth of Non-Tax Incentives	83
Infrastructure Incentives	87
Wage Subsidy and Worker Training Incentives	89
General-Use Grants, Loans, Loan Guarantees, and Related
Debt Instruments	90
Generating Incentive Amounts and Incentive Terms	91
Distributing Incentives across Asset Classes	95
Awarding Grants, Loans, and Loan Guarantees	95
Adding State and City Incentives	98
Limitations of the Analysis I: The Administration of Incentives
Alters Their Worth	98
Limitation of the Analysis II: Completeness of the Non-Tax
Portion of TAIM	103
Limitations of the Analysis III: Targeting Geography	104
Conclusions	105
Notes	106
4 Tax Systems and Incentive Programs in States and Cities	109
Variation in Taxes and Tax Incentives	110
Sales Taxes	110
Corporate Income Taxes and Credits	113
Property Taxes	118
Targeted Tax Incentives	118
Basic Tax Systems versus Tax Incentives	119
The Importance of State versus Local Taxes and Tax Incentives	129
Non-Tax Incentive Programs and Their Value to the Firm	134
The Spatial Pattern of Taxes and Incentives	142
Conclusions	171
Notes	173

5 The Effects of Taxes and Incentives on the Spatial
Distribution of Investment Returns	175
The Pattern of Returns among States	176
The Pattern of Returns among Cities	186
The Effects of Enterprise Zones	190
Conclusions	200
Notes	201
6 Incentive Competition and Public Policy	203
Are Tax and Incentive Differences Important?	203
The Spatial Pattern of Incentives and the National Benefits of Competitive Economic Development Policy	211
Taxes, Incentives, and Efficiency	213
Incentive Competition and Equity	218
Can and Should Incentive Competition Be Curbed?	219
Notes	221
Appendix A Characteristics of the Sample States and Cities	223
Appendix B The Hypothetical Firm Model: Assumptions and Details of Operation	237
Appendix C Computational Structure of TAIM	247
Appendix D Additional Results on the Worth and Spatial Distribution of Taxes and Incentives	253
Appendix E Detailed Results: Correlations between Project Returns and Unemployment Rates for States and Cities	265
References	277
Author Index	289
Subject Index	293