

Financial Accounting: The Main Ideas

Arthur L. Thomas

McMaster University

TECHNISCHE HOCHSCHULE DARMSTADT
Fachbereich 1
Gesamtbibliothek
Betriebswirtschaftslehre
Inventar-Nr. :	37.821
Abstell-Nr. :	A 22/487
Sachgebiete:	2. 1
	3. 2

00210270

*Wadsworth Publishing Company, Inc.
Belmont, California*

Contents

A Foreword to the Student	1
Troublesome Characteristics of Financial Accounting	1
Differences Between This and Other Accounting Texts	7
How to Use This Book	11
The Plan of This Book	12
Part I—Some Raw Materials: Assets and Equities	15
Chapter One—The Background of Financial Accounting	17
What Financial Accounting Does	17
Other Kinds of Accounting	28
Kinds of Accountants	32
Why Study Financial Accounting?	37
A Fundamental Concept: The Asset	38
Historical Purchase Prices and “Conservatism”	54
Monetary Assets	60
Assignment Problems	71
Chapter Two—A Preview, Then Some Refinements	77
The Main Financial Statements and the Accounting Cycle	77
Nonmonetary Assets and Their Amortization	91
Nonmonetary Assets: Examples and Further Complications	95
Current and Noncurrent Assets	110
Monetary/Nonmonetary and Current/Noncurrent Classifications	114
Assignment Problems	117
Chapter Three—A Complementary Concept: The Equity	125
Kinds of Equities	125
The Balance Sheet	140
Balance Sheet Punctuation and Grammar	149
Consolidated Balance Sheets	152
Assignment Problems	161

Part II—Recording Economic Activity 175

Chapter Four—Recording Balance Sheet Changes: Ledgers 177

A Note to the Student	177
Balance Sheet Changes	178
Simple, Two-Account Balance Sheet Changes	182
Summary and Example of Exchanges, Accruals, and Internal Changes	185
Recording Changes on Successive Balance Sheets	186
Recording Changes in Ledger Accounts	200
Typical Changes Within Ledger Accounts	215
Measurement in Financial Accounting	224
Assignment Problems	228

Chapter Five—Recording Balance Sheet Changes: Journals—and Other Devices 241

Recording Individual Changes in Journals	241
Typical Journal Entries	244
Ledger Technicalities	254
Ownership Account Details	258
Stockholders' Equity: Further Complications	264
Assignment Problems	279

Part III—Reporting Economic Activity 293

Chapter Six—Cash Statements 295

Operating and Financial Changes	296
Change Reports	300
Preparation of Cash Statements	301
Determining the Contributions to Cash of Individual Inputs	318
Assignment Problems	324

Chapter Seven—Funds Statements 337

Financial Changes	337
Steps in Constructing a Funds Statement	342
Funds	355
Appendix—Another Way to Study the Funds Statement	369
Assignment Problems	374

Chapter Eight—Income Statements 391

Background	391
How to Prepare an Income Statement	395
Consolidated Income Statements	420
A Detailed Look at the Accountant's Rules for Reporting Revenue	422
Losses and Deficits	441
Assignment Problems	444

Chapter Nine—Relationships Between and Within Financial Statements 455

Expenses and Expenditures; Revenues and Cash Receipts	455
Relationships Between Income Statements and Funds Statements	464
Funds Statement Reporting of Transactions That Do Not Affect Net Working Capital	474
Other Kinds of Funds Statements	477
Appendix—Relationships Between and Within Statements: Ratios	485
Assignment Problems	503

Part IV—Refinements and Complications 515

Chapter Ten—Nominal and Valuation Accounts 517

Nominal Accounts	517
Nominal Accounts in the Ledger; Closing Entries	525
Valuation Accounts	538
The Accounting Cycle	549
Assignment Problems	574

Chapter Eleven—Receivables, Payables, and Compound Interest 585

Receivables: Uncollectible Accounts	585
Premium and Discount on Debt	596
Compound Interest Calculations	602
The Constant Rate Method	610
Receivables and Payables Other Than Bonds	620
Appendix—Present Value Tables	625
Assignment Problems	633

Chapter Twelve—Nonmonetary Assets: Cost Accumulation 643

Noncurrent Assets	643
Repairs and Maintenance	651
Expense Accumulation on Condensed Income Statements	654
Costs of Manufactured Inventories	659
Assignment Problems	687

Chapter Thirteen—Nonmonetary Assets: Cost Amortization 699

The Financial Accounting Dilemma	699
Actual Depreciation Practices	704
Inventories	726
Some Tax Matters	740
Tentative Suggestions for Nonmonetary Asset Amortization	742
A Short Accounting Theory Bibliography	744
Appendix—The Lower of Cost or Market Rule	747
Assignment Problems	754

Glossary 767

Index 779