

Norman Naval Operations in the Mediterranean

Charles D. Stanton

THE BOYDELL PRESS

Contents

List of Illustrations	vi
Acknowledgments	ix
Preface	xi
Abbreviations	xii
Introduction	1
Sicily's strategic significance	2
1 The Conquest (827 to 1101)	9
The Muslim conquest and the coming of the Normans	9
Brothers in battle: joint naval operations by the Hautevilles	27
Guiscard's amphibious assaults on Byzantium	47
Roger's use of sea power to complete the conquest of Sicily	58
2 The Apogee (1101 to 1154)	67
Naval policy in Roger II's early years	68
Naval power in the establishment of Roger's Regno	76
Naval campaigns against Greece	89
The use of sea power in the subjugation of North Africa	102
King Roger's naval strategy	114
3 The Eclipse (1154 to 1194)	128
Naval operations of William I	128
Naval campaigns of William II	143
Dissolution of Norman sea power under Tancred	161
4 The Impact	174
Eastward expansion of West Italian sea power	174
Revitalization of western commerce in the Mediterranean	189
Altered trading patterns of Muslim commerce	205
The resurgence of Sicilian sea power under Frederick II	213
Conclusion	223
Appendix A: The Fleet (ships, sailors, shipyards, strategies)	225
Appendix B: The Sources	273
Bibliography	287
Index	307