

Kieler Studien

Institut für Weltwirtschaft an der Universität Kiel

Herausgegeben von Herbert Giersch

148

Professor Dr. Seev Hirsch

Rich Man's, Poor Man's, and Every Man's Goods

Aspects of Industrialization

Wite

J.C. B. MOHR (PAUL SIEBECK) TÜBINGEN

ISSN 0340-6989

VB TU Darmstadt

51645553

TECHNISCHE HOCHSCHULE
DARMSTADT

Inv.-Nr.:

H 5312

WIRTSCHAFTSPOLITIK
(VOL II)

Contents

	Page
List of Tables	VI
List of Figures	VIII
Introduction	IX
Chapter I: Patterns of Industrialization and Trade	1
1. Introduction	1
2. An Industry Classification Scheme	3
3. Sources of Possible Bias	7
4. Classification Results	9
5. Import and Export Performance	16
6. The Impact of Population and Capital Flows	21
7. Summary	25
Chapter II: Market Power and Commodity Concentration	27
1. Introduction	27
2. Market Power	28
3. Market Power - Statistical Evidence	30
4. Commodity Concentration	36
Chapter III: The Determinants of Trade Patterns	42
1. Introduction	42
2. Output Patterns and Comparative Advantage	43
3. Production Patterns and Comparative Advantage - Em- pirical Evidence	45
4. Capital or Technology - A Theoretical Framework	50
5. Capital or Technology - The Empirical Evidence	56

	Page
Chapter IV: Human Capital, Technological Change and International Trade – Further Analysis	64
1. Introduction	64
2. Export Policies of the Profit Maximizing Firm	65
3. Economies of Scale	68
4. Licensing and Sale of Know-how	71
5. Integrating Technological Changes into the Heckscher-Ohlin Model	75
 Chapter V: Leontief and Kravis Revisited	 77
1. Introduction	77
2. Endowment, Output and Trade	78
3. Leontief's Paradox in a Cross Section Context	80
4. Decomposing the Effect of Factor Endowment	85
5. Human Capital, Leontief's Paradox and Kravis' Paradox	88
6. Summary	89
 Chapter VI: Burenstam-Linder's Model and Intra-Industry Trade	 91
1. Introduction	91
2. Compatibility of Export and Import Capital Intensities	93
3. Export and Import Compatibility	96
4. Intra-Industry Trade	98
5. Conclusions	104
 Chapter VII: Policy Implications	 105
1. Introduction	105
2. The Sequence of Industrialization	107

	Page
3. The Sequence of Industrialization, the Product Cycle and Infrastructure	111
4. Import Substitution and Export Promotion	112
5. Prospects of Expanding Manufactured Exports from Industrializing Countries	117
6. Final Remarks	120

Appendix

Bibliography