

INTERNATIONAL MIGRATION IN AFRICA

Legal and administrative aspects

Sergio Ricca

Contents

---

	Page
Preface .....	v
Part I. The African migration phenomenon .....	1
1. An overview of the problem .....	3
Existing information .....	3
Some indicative figures .....	3
The lack of reliable data and the reasons for it .....	4
Developments and changes in migratory movements .....	10
From the origins to colonisation .....	10
The effects of colonisation .....	11
Present-day migratory flows .....	13
Attempts to interpret the migration phenomenon and the construction of theoretical models .....	15
Lewis, Fei and Ranis: The surplus rural manpower model .....	16
Harris-Todaro: The wage disparity model .....	16
Multi-sectoral analysis models .....	17
Multiple regression analysis models .....	18
The Marxist model .....	18
The dual society or circular migration model .....	19
The main characteristics of migration .....	19
The growth of migration .....	20
The drain on the countries of origin .....	20
The dwindling role of traditional cultural influences on migration .....	20
Are migration circuits and periods of absence lengthening? .....	21
The continuing influence of non-economic factors .....	22
An absence of state intervention .....	22
2. The international legal context and the current status of migration .....	29
International standards .....	29
ILO standards .....	29
Other international standards .....	31
Coverage of international standards in African legislation .....	32
# Treaties signed by the African States .....	32
Attempts at unity .....	32
Regional groupings .....	33
Agreements on the free movement of labour .....	38

An appraisal of migration . . . . .	43
The assessment of the individual migrant . . . . .	43
The assessment of the community of origin . . . . .	44
The assessment of the entire country . . . . .	44
An evaluation of measures designed to curb migration . . . . .	45
Part II. The different types of migration . . . . .	51
3. Organised and clandestine migration . . . . .	53
Organised migration: An administrative model . . . . .	53
Outline of a labour agreement and the guarantee of migrants' individual rights . . . . .	53
Physical organisation of the transfer of migrant workers . . . . .	55
The facts of organised migration . . . . .	56
Clandestine migration: Concepts and facts . . . . .	58
Where legality ends and clandestinity begins . . . . .	58
Some sociological features of clandestine migration . . . . .	59
Border migration . . . . .	61
An extreme measure against clandestine migration: Expulsion . . . . .	63
The history of expulsions . . . . .	63
Expulsions and international law . . . . .	64
The facts of expulsion in Africa . . . . .	66
The alternative to expulsion: Organised migration . . . . .	66
4. Free movement of persons and the nationalisation of jobs . . . . .	71
Measures to promote the free movement of persons . . . . .	71
Unrealistic or overambitious agreements . . . . .	71
The indifference of national laws to the spirit and letter of the agreements . . . . .	72
Other practices obstructing the implementation of agreements on freedom of movement . . . . .	77
The nationalisation of jobs . . . . .	79
From Africanisation to nationalisation . . . . .	79
The nationalisation of jobs in the public sector and bilateral co-operation programmes . . . . .	80
The nationalisation of jobs in the private and parastatal sectors . . . . .	82
5. The brain drain and emigration from the continent . . . . .	91
The brain drain . . . . .	91
The brain drain debate . . . . .	91
Student migration . . . . .	93
The emigration and return of qualified personnel . . . . .	95
Emigration from the continent . . . . .	96
Migration for employment . . . . .	96
Migration for population . . . . .	97
Clandestine migration . . . . .	98

Migration to the Middle East oil-producing countries . . . . .	98
Migration for employment must be legal . . . . .	100
Migrants working abroad must meet the demands of the job . . . . .	101
Migrants working abroad are entitled to protection against possible abuses . . . . .	101
Migration must benefit the country of departure . . . . .	101
Secondment of civil servants . . . . .	102
6. The reintegration of returning migrants . . . . .	107
Mass returns or the reintegration of expellees . . . . .	108
The reintegration of Ghanaian migrants in 1983 and 1985 . . . . .	108
The reintegration of Zimbabwean repatriates . . . . .	112
The reintegration of migrants in Burkina Faso . . . . .	113
Subsidised returns from Europe . . . . .	113
A general overview . . . . .	113
The different types of incentive . . . . .	114
The programme for the return of African immigrants from France . . . . .	117
Conditions for the success of subsidised return programmes . . . . .	121
7. The administration of migration: A general survey . . . . .	125
The organisation of legislative and regulatory machinery . . . . .	125
The dispersal of legal provisions . . . . .	125
The incoherence of legal provisions . . . . .	126
The need for a common conception . . . . .	127
The organisation of institutional and administrative machinery . . . . .	127
The organisation of statistics . . . . .	129
The organisation of censuses . . . . .	130
Co-operation and co-ordination in the organisation of surveys . . . . .	130
Setting up a continuous reporting system . . . . .	131
Supranational co-operation . . . . .	132
The classification of occupations . . . . .	132
Joint efforts in higher education . . . . .	133
Part III. Specific migrations . . . . .	135
8. Refugee movements . . . . .	137
The dimensions of the problem . . . . .	137
Recognition of refugee status and the law . . . . .	139
International conventions . . . . .	139
National laws . . . . .	141
Support structures . . . . .	142
International support structures . . . . .	142
National support structures . . . . .	144
The organisation of refugee movements . . . . .	145
Spontaneous asylum-seekers . . . . .	145
The organisation of group movements . . . . .	146

The integration of refugees into the host community . . . . .	148
The organisation of repatriation . . . . .	150
The organisation of movements to third countries . . . . .	151
9. Migration to South Africa . . . . .	155
General characteristics of migration to South Africa . . . . .	155
The facts and figures . . . . .	155
Characteristics and trends of the migration policy of South Africa and the mining companies . . . . .	156
The laws governing migration movements . . . . .	160
The authorities responsible for organising migration . . . . .	163
How migration flows work . . . . .	164
Working conditions of ordinary immigrant miners . . . . .	164
Migration in the non-mining sector . . . . .	167
Illegal migration . . . . .	168
The response of the labour-sending countries . . . . .	169
The extent of dependence on South Africa . . . . .	169
Measures to reduce dependence on South Africa . . . . .	170
Index . . . . .	179

Figures

1. Principal migratory movements in Africa . . . . .	14
2. Refugee populations in Africa . . . . .	138