Contents

List of Contributors	xi
Preface	xiii

1. The Perception of Musical Tones

R. A. Rasch and R. Plomp

I. The Psychoacoustics of Music	1
II. Perceptual Attributes of Single Tones	6
III. Perceptual Attributes of Simultaneous Tones	14
IV. Conclusion	21
References	21

2. Exploration of Timbre by Analysis and Synthesis

Jean-Claude Risset and David L. Wessel

I. Timbre	26
II. Timbre and the Fourier Spectrum: The Classical View	26
III. The Shortcomings of the Classical Conception	29
IV. Attack Transients	29
V. Complexity of Sounds: Importance of Characteristic Features	30
VI. Instrumental and Vocal Timbres: Additive Synthesis	30
VII. Cross Synthesis and Voice Synthesis	34
VIII. Additive Synthesis: Percussion Instruments	37
IX. Subtractive Synthesis	39
X. Acoustic Modeling as a Synthesis Technique	41
XI. The Importance of Context	42
XII. Analysis-Synthesis as Fitting Acoustic and Perceptual Models to Data	44
XIII. The Use of Analysis-Synthesis Models of Timbre	45
XIV. Timbral Space	47
XV. Conclusion	49
Appendix: Signal Representations and Analysis-Synthesis Processes	50
References	54

3. Perception of Singing

Johan Sundberg

- I. Introduction 59
- II. Function of the Voice 60
- III. Resonatory Aspects 62
- IV. Phonation 76
- V. Vibrato 82
- VI. Pitch Accuracy in Singing Practice 89
- VII. Phrasing and Emotion 91
- VIII. Concluding Remarks 94
- References 95

4. Grouping Mechanisms in Music

Diana Deutsch

- I. Introduction 99
- II. Grouping Principles 100
- III. Two-Channel Listening to Melodic Sequences 101
- IV. Channeling of Rapid Sequences of Single Tones 118
- V. Voluntary Attention 127
- VI. Conclusion 130
- References 130

5. The Listener and the Acoustic Environment

R. A. Rasch and R. Plomp

- I. Introduction 135
- II. Methodology 137
- III. Level Effects of Indirect Sound: Loudness 140
- IV. Temporal Effects of Indirect Sound: Definition 141
- V. Spatial Effects of Indirect Sound: Spaciousness 142
- VI. The Compromise between Definition and Spaciousness 145
- VII. Conclusion 146
- References 146

6. Rhythm and Tempo

Paul Fraisse

- I. Definitions 149
- II. Rhythm and Spontaneous Tempo 151
- III. Rhythmic Forms 157
- IV. The Perception of Musical Rhythms 170
- V. Conclusion 175
- References 177

7. Timing by Skilled Musicians

Saul Sternberg, Ronald L. Knoll, and Paul Zukofsky

- I. Perception, Production, and Imitation of Fractions of the Beat 182
- II. Perceptual Judgment of Beat Fractions 187
- III. Production of Beat Fractions 198
- IV. Imitation of Beat Fractions 207
- V. A Shared-Process Model of the Perception, Production, and Imitation of Beat Fractions 212
- VI. Further Analysis of Perceptual Judgment 215
- VII. Further Analysis of Production 224
- VIII. Summary 229
- Glossary 231
- Appendix 231
- References 237

8. Intervals, Scales, and Tuning

Edward M. Burns and W. Dixon Ward

- I. Introduction 241
- II. Are Scales Necessary? 243
- III. Musical Interval Perception 246
- IV. Natural Intervals and Scales 255
- V. Conclusions and Caveats 264
- References 265

9. The Processing of Pitch Combinations

Diana Deutsch

- I. Introduction 271
- II. Feature Abstraction 272
- III. Higher Order Abstractions 282
- IV. Alphabets and Hierarchies 287
- V. Memory Systems 291
- VI. Conclusions 311
- References 312

10. Melodic Processes and the Perception of Music

Burton S. Rosner and Leonard B. Meyer

- I. The Perception and Classification of Two Archetypal Melodic Processes 317
- II. Experimental Findings 326
- III. Implications 339
- References 340

11. Structural Representations of Musical Pitch

Roger N. Shepard

- I. Introduction 344
- II. Unidimensional Approaches to Pitch 344
- III. Potentially Multidimensional Approaches to Pitch 347
- IV. The Spatial Representation of Pitch 350
- V. Illustrative Analyses of Empirical Data 365
- VI. Discussion 369
- References 385

12. Musical Ability

Rosamund Shuter-Dyson

- I. Concepts of Musical Ability 391
- II. Correlational and Factorial Studies of Musical Ability 393
- III. Musical Ability and Other Intellectual Abilities 404
- References 408

13. Melodic Information Processing and Its Development

W. Jay Dowling

- I. Introduction 413
- II. Development 415
- III. Adult Memory 421
- IV. Contour versus Interval 427
- V. Summary 427
- References 428

14. Absolute Pitch

W. Dixon Ward and Edward M. Burns

- I. Introduction 431
- II. Genesis of AP 434
- III. Measurement of AP 436
- IV. Stability of the Internal Standard 444
- V. Learning AP 445
- VI. The Value of AP 447
- References 449

15. Neurological Aspects of Music Perception and Performance

Oscar S. M. Marin

- I. Introduction 453

- II. Amusia 454
- III. Auditory Agnosia and Verbal Deafness 462
- IV. General Comments 466
- References 473

16. Music Performance

John A. Sloboda

- I. Introduction 479
- II. The Nature of Performance Plans 480
- III. Acquisition of Performance Plans 483
- IV. The Role of Feedback in Performance 488
- V. Social Factors in Performance 491
- VI. Summary 494
- References 494

17. Social Interaction and Musical Preference

Vladimír J. Konečni

- I. Introduction 497
- II. Effects of Social Stimulation on Aesthetic Choice 502
- III. Effects of Information Load and Arousing Nonsocial Stimulation on Aesthetic Choice 505
- IV. Effects of Listening to Melodies Differing in Complexity on Emotional States and Social Behavior 507
- V. Listeners' Sequencing and "Chunking" of Musical Materials and the Use of Music for Mood Optimization 511
- References 515

18. New Music and Psychology

Robert Erickson

- I. Introduction 517
- II. Music Theory and Music 519
- III. Understanding Tonality 520
- IV. Music and Perceptual Streaming 523
- V. Fused Sounds in Music 529
- VI. Music Theory and Experimental Science 534
- References 535
