

Le Corbusier, the Noble Savage

Toward an Archaeology of Modernism

Adolf Max Vogt

translated by Radka Donnell

The MIT Press
Cambridge, Massachusetts
London, England

Contents

Preface ix

Part I “The Weight of Things”—Does It Count Longer Than the Name of Things? 1

- 1 “Les 5 Points” (1926): New Building Material—a New House 4
- 2 The Box on Pilotis as a Leitmotif 15
- 3 Does the Cell Partition Contradict the Dream of Pilotis? 22
- 4 A Steep but Consistent Climb toward the Villa Savoye and the Palace of the League of Nations 27
- 5 LC in Istanbul (1911): The Oriel Principle (Cikma Construction) 32
- 6 Istanbul (1911): The Summer House on the Waterfront (Yali) 46
- 7 Istanbul (1911): The Pavilion (Kösk) 58

Part II A Hymn in Praise of Pilotis—and in Praise of Jean-Jacques Rousseau 79

- 8 The Buenos Aires Pulpit 80
- 9 The “Airy Grove of Pilotis” (La Forêt Légère des Pilotis) 86
- 10 A Hymn in Praise of the Shores of the Lake of Geneva 93
- 11 A Cathar-Battles against the Dark and Musty Cellars of the Old World 101
- 12 A Reform of the City from the Ground Up 104
- 13 Unexpected Illuminations (Eclairs Inattendus) 108
 - The Dom-ino System, 1914–1915 108
 - The Villes-Pilotis and the Watercolor of La Tène, Both Dated 1915 114
 - Repetitions of the Initial Motifs until 1930 126
- 14 Leading Jean-Jacques Rousseau’s Sheep to Pasture 133
 - Jean-Jacques and Charles-Edouard, or, Are Such Far-flung Connections Credible? 138

Part III	The Fisherman's Hut and the Huts of the Crannoges	151
	15 From the Fisherman's Hut to the Palace: LC's Architectural Analogy to Jean-Jacques Rousseau	152
	16 The President's Pavilion as the Crowning of the League of Nations Concept	160
	17 LC's Archaeological Drawings and the Huts of the Crannoges	183
Part IV	The Swiss Lake-Dwelling Fever	221
	18 The Discovery of Lake Dwellings on the Lake of Zurich (1854)	225
	19 Pacific Lake Dwellings and Their Illustrator, Louis-Antoine de Sainson	230
	20 How Are Pile-Work Constructions and Life above Water to Be Explained?	233
	21 Buildings on Stilts	238
	22 Findings on the Lake of Neuchâtel and the 1867 Exposition Universelle in Paris	242
	23 The Helvetian Appropriation of New Guinea Villages on Pile-Work above the Water	247
	24 The Influence of the Paleontologist Cuvier on the Swiss Reconstruction of the Primeval World	254
	25 The Haptic Joys of Closeness to Life: The Building Model Gains Dominant Significance	260
	26 The Painters of Lake-Dwelling Romanticism	268
Part V	LC's Early School Years and Their Dreams of Primary Origins	285
	27 Back to LC's Early School Years: Froebel's Geometric "Gifts" in Kindergarten	286
	28 Lake-Dwelling Fever in the Elementary School	300
	The Canton of Neuchâtel as a Pedagogic Pioneer	300
	The Metropolis of the Watch Industry Becomes a Pedagogic Model	303
	29 The Father, the School, the Canton of Valais	306
	Professional Problems of LC's Father	306
	The Curriculum of 1890	308
	The Father's Passion for Mountaineering and the Primeval Alpine Architecture of Valais	310

30	Viollet-le-Duc in Lausanne; Mirror Images	322
	Viollet-le-Duc as a Witness of the New Sensibility for Analogy	322
	Mirror Images	325

Part VI

Why LC “Knows” What Modernism Is 333

	First Conclusion: The Double Imprint of the Primary	335
	Second Conclusion: The Formative Imprint of the Cultural Geography of the Suisse-Romande on the Young LC	337
	Third Conclusion: Why LC Knows for Certain What Modernism Is	340

	Notes	341
	Illustration Credits	355
	Index	359