

Evelyn Wareham

Race and Realpolitik

The Politics of Colonisation
in German Samoa

PETER LANG

Europäischer Verlag der Wissenschaften

Contents

Introduction: Rethinking Race in Pacific Colonial History	11
Chapter One: Historical Overview of German Samoa	23
Chapter Two: The Colonising Mission: Developing Samoan Difference	31
I. Native Policy: To Preserve and to Cultivate	33
II. Seeing the Samoans: Racial Ideals and Protective Policy	46
III. The Limitations of Rule: Marginal Colonisation and Imperial Ethics	56
Chapter Three: Going Troppo: White Degeneration or White Settlement?	65
I. Samoa as the Salvation of Deutschtum : Richard Deeken's Vision of Nationalist Settlement Colonisation	66
II. Conflicting Visions: Tensions between Administration and Colonists	73
III. Wilhelm Solf's White Race in the Tropics: Mental, Physical and Cultural Degeneration	76
Chapter Four: Economies of Race: Classifying the Indentured Labour Force	91
I. "Samoans' Work" and the Need for Labour	91
II. A Racial Symbiosis of Work: Assigning Tasks through Race Science	95
III. Mongol Merchants: The Chinese Racial Threat	98
IV. Racial Ideals outside the "West": Chinese Nationalism	112
Chapter Five: Legislating Division: Sex, Citizenship and Empire	123
I. "Going European": Granting Half-Castes Citizenship	124
II. The Process of Change: Countering the Half-Caste Racial Threat	133
III. Closing the Racial Frontier: Legislating against Mixed Marriage	138
IV. Periphery and Centre: The Politicisation of Race in Germany	146
Conclusion: Race and Imperial Tensions	155

Appendix A: German and French Quotations	165
Appendix B: Statistical Tables	177
Appendix C: Chronology of Samoa under German Administration	181
Glossary	185
Bibliography	187
Index	201