

The economics of defense

Todd Sandler

Iowa State University

and

Keith Hartley

University of York

Contents

Preface	page	xi
1 Defense economics: an introduction		1
I Alliances, defense demand, and arms races		17
2 The economic theory of alliances		19
3 The demand for military expenditures		52
4 Arms races		73
II Defense inputs, industrial base, and growth		111
5 Procurement: theories, evidence, and policies		113
6 Military manpower		156
7 Defense and the industrial base		177
8 Economic growth, development, and military expenditures		200
III Defense policies, trade, disarmament, and conversion		221
9 Industrial and alliance policies		223
10 The arms trade		242
11 Arms control and disarmament		260
12 Conversion		284
IV New developments and future directions		303
13 Nonconventional conflict: revolutions, guerrilla warfare, and terrorism		305
14 Conclusions and research agenda for the future		336
References		347
Author index		377
Subject index		382