

---

TELEWORK: TOWARDS THE ELUSIVE OFFICE

Ursula Huws, Werner B. Korte
AND Simon Robinson
for Empirica

John Wiley
INFORMATION SYSTEMS SERIES

---

JOHN WILEY & SONS

Chichester · New York · Brisbane · Toronto · Singapore

---

Contents

SERIES FOREWORD	ix
ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS	xi
A NOTE ON THE LITERATURE ON TELEWORK	xiii
CHAPTER 1— Introduction—What is Telework?	1
CHAPTER 2— Telework in the General Context of Office Automation	11
CHAPTER 3— The Organisation and Management of Telework	28
CHAPTER 4— The Economics of Telework	35
Office Overhead Costs	36
Equipment Costs	37
Start-up Costs	38
Transportation Costs	39
Management Costs	40
Communications Costs	41
Welfare Benefits	43
Pay	43
Productivity	44
Other Savings to Employers	46
Other Savings to Teleworkers	46
Conclusions	46
CHAPTER 5— Telework and the Law	48
Contractual Relationships	48
Insurance	52
Health and Safety	52
Collective Representation Rights	53
Planning Regulations	54
Regulation or Banning of Homework	55

CHAPTER 6—	How it Feels—the Human Aspects of Telework	56
	Child Care	58
	Career Advancement	61
	Social Contact	62
	Autonomy	65
	Personal Relationships	67
	Conclusions	69
CHAPTER 7—	The Tasks Involved in Telework	70
CHAPTER 8—	The Empirica Telework Survey—I. Telework in 14 European Companies	81
	The Telework Projects in the Survey	83
CHAPTER 9—	The Empirica Telework Survey—II. Results of the Survey	96
	How Telework was Introduced	97
	Advantages and Disadvantages of Telework	102
	Place of Work	106
	Recruitment	106
	Involvement in the Introduction of Telework	108
	Skills and Qualifications	108
	Occupation	111
	Use of Information Technology	112
	Employment Status	115
	Pay	118
	Working Hours	127
	Supervision, Control and Productivity Measurement	133
	Satisfaction with Telework	135
	Constraints on Telework	138
	Factors which Facilitate Telework	143
	Expectations and Future Plans	146
	Conclusions	147
CHAPTER 10—	The Demand for Telework—an Empirica Survey of Decision Makers in Europe	151
	Methodology	151
	The Tasks Considered most Suitable for Telework	152
	Interest in Telework	152
	The Decision Makers in the Survey	160
	Reasons for not Decentralising Office Work	160
	Conclusions	173

CHAPTER 11—The Supply of Telework—an Empirica Survey of Employees in Europe	178
General Results	178
Existing Computer Users	179
Age	181
Variations by Industry	189
Variations by Job Content	191
Household Structure	191
Occupational Status	193
Variations by Company Size	198
Summary	198
CHAPTER 12—Forecasting Future Developments	201
Attitude and Opinion Surveys	201
Extrapolation from Existing Statistics	203
Analysis of Existing Home Computer Use	205
Estimates of the Extent of Homeworking	205
Conclusions	207
CHAPTER 13—Telework and Social and Economic Change	209
Energy Consumption, Transportation and the Telecommunications Infrastructure	209
Planning and Land-use	211
Regional Development	214
Legal, Taxation and Worker Protection Issues	215
Family and Community Structure	216
Education and Training	218
Conclusions	218
APPENDIX A—Empirica Telework Survey	223
APPENDIX B—Demographic Characteristics of all Teleworkers in the Sample of Teleworking Organisations	243
APPENDIX C—Major Reasons for Telework Inception on a Case-by-Case Basis	244
APPENDIX D—Teleworkers' Perception of Advantages and Disadvantages of Teleworking	246
APPENDIX E—Types of IT and Telecommunications Networks used in Telework Schemes	252
APPENDIX F—Results of a Factor Analysis on the Respondent's Structure of Satisfaction with Teleworking	254
APPENDIX G—Sampling and Weighting Procedure for the Empirica Survey of Decision Makers	255

APPENDIX H—Structure of the Employed People Survey	258
APPENDIX I—Weighting of Data in Empirica’s Employed People Survey	259
APPENDIX J—Socio-economic and Demographic Factors Considered in the Analysis of the Survey of Employed People	260
REFERENCES	263
INDEX	273