

The Nature of Managerial Work

HENRY MINTZBERG
McGill University

HARPER & ROW, PUBLISHERS
New York, Evanston, San Francisco, London

Contents

List of Figures vii

List of Tables vii

Preface viii

Foreword xi

1. Introduction 1

2. Contemporary Views of the Manager's Job 7

The Classical School 8

The Great Man School 11

The Entrepreneurship School 12

The Decision Theory School 13

The Leader Effectiveness School 17

The Leader Power School 18

The Leader Behavior School 19

The Work Activity School 21

Four Aspects of Managerial Work 26

3. Some Distinguishing Characteristics of Managerial Work 28

Much Work at Unrelenting Pace 29

Activity Characterized by Brevity, Variety, and Fragmentation 31

Preference for Live Action 35

Attraction to the Verbal Media 38

Between his Organization and a Network of Contacts 44

Blend of Rights and Duties 48

Propositions about Managerial Work Characteristics 51

4. The Manager's Working Roles 54

The Set of Ten Roles 55

The Interpersonal Roles 58

The Informational Roles 65

The Decisional Roles 77

The Manager's Basic Purposes 94

Propositions about Managerial Roles 96

5. Variations in Managers' Work 100

A Contingency Theory of Managerial Work 101

The Job in the Environment 103

The Job Itself—Level and Function 109
The Person in the Job 118
The Job Over Time 122
Eight Managerial Job Types 126
Propositions about Variations in Managers' Work 129

6. Science and the Manager's Job 132

Programming the Manager's Work 133
Studies of the Manager's Programs 136
The Role of the Management Scientist at the Policy Level 142
Reprogramming Scheduling Activity 146
Reprogramming the Information System 148
Reprogramming the Strategy-Making System 152
Propositions about a Science of Managing 161

7. The Future of Managerial Work 165

A Comprehensive Description of Managerial Work 166
The Manager in a "Loop" 173
Implications for the Manager 174
Implications for Teachers of Managers 186
Implications for the Management Scientist 195
Implications for the Researcher 197

Appendix A: Major Studies of the Manager's Job 199

Appendix B: Seven Research Methods Used to Study Managerial Work 221

Appendix C: A Study of the Work of Five Chief Executives 230

Bibliography 279

Index 291