

Kay Schaffer

South Australian College of Advanced Education

*The right of the University of Cambridge to print and sell
all manner of books was granted by
Henry VIII in 1534.
The University has printed and published continuously since 1584.*

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

Cambridge

New York New Rochelle Melbourne Sydney

CONTENTS

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS	ix
INTRODUCTION	xi
Overview of the Study	xii
CHAPTER 1: CULTURE, LANGUAGE AND THE SELF	1
To Find a National Identity	1
The Australian Tradition	4
Women in the National Tradition	5
Culture, Language and the Self	8
Cultural Constructions	15
The Myth of the Typical Australian	19
Landscape Representation: Woman as Other	22
A Question of Origins	23
On Desire	24
Methods and Intentions	25
CHAPTER 2: IN SEARCH OF A NATIONAL IDENTITY	28
Naming a National Tradition	29
Henry Lawson as Founding Father	34
The Call for an Indigenous Culture before Lawson	38
Validations	40
Lawson and Divergent Approaches to the Code of Nationalism	41
Rethinking the Question of Origins	45
Women and Questions of National Identity	50
CHAPTER 3: THE BUSH AND WOMEN	52
The Colonial Context	59
Exploring the Landscape	60
No Place for a Woman	62
Feminist Perspectives on Women in Australia	65
Deconstructing the Woman in Australian Cultural Studies	70
The 'Bush Mum' Revisited	70
Current Feminist Approaches to Questions of National Identity	73

CONTENTS

CHAPTER 4: LANDSCAPE REPRESENTATION AND NATIONAL IDENTITY	77
The Pre-texts of a Colonial Culture	79
The Dispersement of 'Woman' and the Idea of Australia	81
An Australian Nationalist Tradition	85
The Theme of Two Mistresses	85
Hancock's Australia	86
Heseltine and Modern New Critical Approaches	87
McQueen and New Left Approaches	89
Common Assumptions	91
Dispersement of 'Woman': The Gold Rush	91
Palmer and Ward on the Gold Rush	95
Modernists and Manning Clark	98
Women Writers and the Battle with the Land	102
Henry Handel Richardson and the Critics	103
Male Standards and Female Dissidence	106
CHAPTER 5: HENRY LAWSON: THE PEOPLE'S POET	112
The Construction of Henry Lawson	113
Women in Lawson's Fiction	118
Lawson Criticism: The Uses of the Feminine	128
A Re-reading of 'The Drover's Wife'	132
A Search for Origins	137
Biographical Studies of Lawson's Personality	139
CHAPTER 6: BARBARA BAYNTON: A DISSIDENT VOICE FROM THE BUSH	148
The Construction of Barbara Baynton	150
Women in Baynton's Fiction	151
'The Chosen Vessel'—and the Critics	153
Themes in Baynton's Work	156
Critical Judgements	157
Baynton's Bush	159
Textual/Sexual Strategies	161
A Re-reading of 'The Chosen Vessel'	163

CONTENTS

CHAPTER 7: CONCLUSION	171
Speculations	173
The Presence of the Past: New Fictions	174
The Bush and Women: Some Enduring Fictions	176
Reading the Cultural Codes	179
The National Character	179
A Game of A-Luce through the Looking Glass: or, 'Woman' through the Australian Bush Tradition	183
NOTES	190
BIBLIOGRAPHY	209
INDEX	222