

Egor S. Stroev · Leonid S. Bliakhman
Mikhail I. Krotov

Russia and Eurasia at the Crossroads

Experience and Problems of Economic Reforms in the Commonwealth of Independent States

Springer

CONTENTS

Introduction . . . . .	1
Chapter 1 The CIS in the World Economy . . . . .	5
1.1 The CIS and Its Economic Potential . . . . .	5
General information (5). – Competitive quality of the national economy (7). – Natural resources (9). – Human potential in the CIS (10)
1.2 Natural Resources and Production Potential of the CIS Countries . . . . .	12
Azerbaijan (12). – Armenia (13). – Georgia (13). – Belarus (13). – Kazakhstan (14). – Kyrgyzstan (14). – Moldova (14). – Russia (15). – Tajikistan (16). – Turkmenistan (17). – Uzbekistan (17). – The Ukraine (18)
1.3 Industry in the CIS Countries in the Twentieth Century . . . . .	19
Industry as a basis for the economy (19). – Principal phases of industrialisation (19). – Industry in the post-war period (21). – Industry in the CIS in the 1990s (22)
1.4 The CIS in World Economic Relationships . . . . .	25
Competitive advantages of CIS economies (25). – Integration in world economic relationships (27). – Export market structure (29). – Import market structure (32). – Geographic structure of foreign trade (34)
Field of Debate . . . . .	37
Chapter 2 General Goals of Economic Reforms . . . . .	38
2.1 Towards Sustainable Development in Society . . . . .	38
Sustainable development and the market (38). – Major stages of social development in the twentieth century (41). – The sustainable development society (44). – The market in a sustainable development society (46). – Three roads to a sustainable development society (48)
2.2 Structural Economic Reforms. The Liberal Model . . . . .	52
General background of structural reforms (52). – Models of reforms (54). – The Western version of liberal reforms (61). – Reforms in Central and Eastern Europe (64)
2.3 Institutional Reforms . . . . .	69
Institutional models of reforms (69). – Reforms in Western countries (70). – Reforms in China and Vietnam (71). – Reforms in other Asian countries (74). – Prospects for institutional reforms in the CIS (76)
Field of Debate . . . . .	78

Chapter 3 Denationalisation, Privatisation and Economic Security in the CIS Countries . . . . .	80
3.1 Denationalisation: Rational Level . . . . .	80
Denationalisation – liberal model (80). – The CIS needs a model of its own (82). – Structural policy (89). – Regulating prices and natural monopolies (91). – Regulating foreign trade (96). – The centre and the regions (97)
3.2 Advantages and Disadvantages of Privatisation . . . . .	99
Privatisation and its purposes (99). – Forms of privatisation in the CIS countries (104). – Control of State property (106). – Financial and industrial groups (108)
3.3 Development of Small-Scale Business . . . . .	112
Criteria for defining small-scale business (112). – Macro-economic effect of small-scale business (114). – Privileges for small-scale business (116). – Prospects for collective property (119)
3.4 Economic Security and Choice of Future Strategy for Reforms . . . . .	120
Efficiency criterion for structural reforms (120). – Economic security (125). – Summary of reforms in the 1990s (127). – Special features of reforms in individual CIS countries (131). – Adjusting reform strategy (137). – Role of mass entrepreneurship (141)
Field of Debate . . . . .	142
Chapter 4 Forming Market Infrastructure . . . . .	143
4.1 Commercial Infrastructure . . . . .	143
Infrastructure and its role in modern economy (143). – Banking and financial infrastructure (144). – Insurance market and real estate (150). – Stock market (152). – Goods and services market infrastructure (159)
4.2 Industrial and Environmental Infrastructure . . . . .	160
General issues of transport development (160). – Power system (164). – Communications infrastructure (165). – Information networks (167). – Environmental infrastructure (170)
4.3 Public Social Protection . . . . .	172
Social orientation of reforms (172). – Real incomes in the CIS (175). – Housing and utilities reform (180). – Reforms in public health (183). – Pension reform (187). – Educational reform (190). – Employment infrastructure (192)
Field of Debate . . . . .	196
Chapter 5 Towards a New Structure of Public Economy . . . . .	198
5.1 Science-Technology Core of Structural Reforms . . . . .	198
Basic strategies of structural reform (198). – Science-technology core of economy (208). – Conversion of the military-industrial complex (213)

5.2 Development of High-Technology Industries . . . . .	220
Aerospace industry (220). – Motor-car industry (221). – Shipbuilding (223). – Computer engineering (224). – Electronics, electrical engineering and power machine building (227)
5.3 The Fuel-Energy and Raw-Materials Complex . . . . .	230
Oil and gas and coal industries (230). – Electric power production (240). – Ferrous and non-ferrous metallurgy (243). – The chemical complex (247). – The forestry complex (249)
Field of Debate . . . . .	250
Chapter 6 Changes in the Agroindustrial Sector . . . . .	252
6.1 The CIS Agroindustrial Complex Towards the End of the Twentieth Century . . . . .	252
Agrarian sector in CIS economies (252). – Industrial development in the agrarian sector (257). – Food exports and imports (260)
6.2 Agrarian Reforms . . . . .	263
Changes in agricultural enterprises (263). – Private land ownership (268). – Government regulation of agrarian economy (272). – The new technology structure (275)
6.3 Development of Processing Industries of Agroindustrial Complex and Food Safety in the CIS . . . . .	278
Food safety (278). – Development of food industry (279). – Light industry in the CIS (281)
Field of Debate . . . . .	283
Chapter 7 Macro-Economic Policies in CIS Member States . . . . .	285
7.1 Budgetary Policy . . . . .	285
Government budget in a transitional economy (285). – Budget deficit and State debt (290). – Consolidated budget structure (296). – Improvement of budgetary procedures (298)
7.2 Credit and Monetary Policy . . . . .	301
General conception of credit and monetary policy (301). – Inflation in CIS countries (306). – Crisis of payments and way out (310). – Currency policy (313). – Relations between the State and financial groups (314)
7.3 Investment Policy . . . . .	317
Investments in transition economy (317). – Investment crisis (320). – Government investment policy (324)
7.4 Role of Foreign Investment . . . . .	328
Why are foreign investments required? (328). – Investment climate (332). – Forms of attracting foreign investments (335)

VIII Contents

7.5 Tax Policy . . . . .	337
Tax policy and its purposes (337). – Principal tax types (341). – Tax reform (344). – Towards unity of economy (348)
Field of Debate . . . . .	351
Chapter 8 Micro-Economic Basis of Reforms . . . . .	353
8.1 The Firm in the Pseudo-Market Economy . . . . .	353
The firm as a principal unit of the market economy (353). – Revolution in management (357). – Fundamentals of pseudo-market economy (360)
8.2 Major Trends in Firm Restructuring . . . . .	362
Evolution and use of property rights (362). – Transition to international accounting standards (363). – Enhancing investment attractiveness of manufacturing firms (365). – Integrated management (368)
8.3 Insolvency and Preventing Insolvency . . . . .	371
Insolvency as a phenomenon of market economy (371). – Monitoring of firm is solvency (375). – Anti-crisis management (377)
Field of Debate . . . . .	382
Chapter 9 CIS Countries on the Way to Regional Economic Integration . . . . .	384
9.1 Regional Economic Integration in Today's World . . . . .	384
The region in modern economy (384). – Regional economic groupings (387). – European Union experience of integration (389)
9.2 Experience and Problems of Economic Integration in the CIS . . . . .	397
General principles of CIS forming (397). – Legal considerations of integration (403). – Benefits and challenges of integration (410). – Integrated groupings within the CIS (421)
9.3 Towards a Common Economic Space . . . . .	424
Main stages of integration (424). – The free trade zone as a realistic phase of integration (428). – The customs union (431). – The monetary union (436). – Prospects of the currency union (441)
9.4 Towards a Common Science-Technology and Education Space . . . . .	445
Co-ordination of the scientific and technical policies (445). – Major trends of reforms (446). – Legal protection of intellectual property (449). – Integration into the science-and-technology community (453). – Towards a unified education space (455)
9.5 Organisational Forms of Integration . . . . .	456
Direct links are all-important (456). – Finance-industrial groups (460). – Transnational corporations in the CIS (465)
9.6 The Petersburg Economic Forum . . . . .	467

9.7 Issues of Economic Integration in International Research . . . . .	469
Objective backgrounds, ways and forms of regional economic integration (469). – International political economy as a new branch of economic science (471). – Structural reforms as a precondition of economic integration (474). – Science-and- technology and educational backgrounds of integration (476). – Financial basis of integration (478). – Managing economic integration in the CIS conditions (480)
Field of Debate . . . . .	483
Conclusion . . . . .	485
Literature. . . . .	488
The Country Index . . . . .	493