

Meaning, Discourse and Society

Wolfgang Teubert

CAMBRIDGE
UNIVERSITY PRESS

Contents

| | |
|--|-----------------|
| Acknowledgements | page vii |
| Introduction | 1 |
| No meaning without other people | 1 |
| The futile quest for a language system | 5 |
| Should the mind be an object of scientific enquiry? | 9 |
| The discourse community constructs reality | 11 |
| The sixteen topics of this book | 12 |
| Part I Meaning, the mind and the brain | 31 |
| 1 The cognitive turn | 33 |
| 2 The long history of mind linguistics | 47 |
| 3 What do we know about mental concepts? | 53 |
| 4 Morphing theoretical sémes into 'real' concepts | 63 |
| 5 From mental representations to conceptual ontologies | 67 |
| 6 What is meaning? | 73 |
| 7 Where should we look for meaning? | 88 |
| Option a: The individual intentional mind | 88 |
| Option b: The individual computational mind/brain | 90 |
| Option c: The brain where language becomes reality | 95 |
| Option d: The discourse as the collective mind | 107 |
| Part II Discourse and society | 111 |
| 8 Language as discourse | 113 |
| 9 Society presupposes language, and language presupposes society | 124 |
| Language as an essential human feature | 124 |
| Language and society | 127 |

| | | |
|----|--|-----|
| | Blumer's symbolic interactionism | 132 |
| | From the individual mind to the discourse as the collective mind | 135 |
| 10 | A closer look at oral societies | 140 |
| 11 | Differences between oral and literate societies | 150 |
| | The profane and the arcane origins of writing | 152 |
| | Some effects of literacy | 156 |
| | Literacy, meaning and reflection | 163 |
| 12 | Empirical linguistics deals only with recorded language | 166 |
| 13 | Meaning, knowledge and the construction of reality | 171 |
| | Truth and meaning | 171 |
| | Meaning and knowledge | 176 |
| | The collaborative construction of reality | 180 |
| 14 | The language of the scientific experimental report | 190 |
| 15 | Diachronicity, intertextuality and hermeneutics | 199 |
| 16 | Meaning and the interpretation of a haiku | 215 |
| | Conclusion | 241 |
| | Authorship, intentionality and mental states: can the quest for meaning dispense with the investigation of the solitary mind? | 241 |
| | How real are the realities we experience? | 249 |
| | The social dimension of experience and intentionality | 258 |
| | Why the media discourse advertises individual agency | 262 |
| | We can collaborate to change our reality | 269 |
| | Bibliography | 273 |
| | Index | 283 |