Table of Contents

Foreword.................................................................ix
Acknowledgements......................................................xiii
Editor's Introduction....................................................xv
Introduction.............................................................xxi

1: Early life in the village and the town, 1932–50.............1
2: Kutama, 1950–53..........................................................13
3: Return to the Copperbelt, 1953–58.................................16
4: Experiments in inter-racial politics, 1958.......................20
5: The colonial civil servant and Cambridge, 1960–62...........22
6: To Katanga and back, 1962–64....................................28
7: First years of independence, 1964–67............................33
8: Disillusionment, 1967–68..............................................39
9: Minister of State, 1969–70.............................................44
10: Governor of the Bank of Zambia, 1970–72.....................49
11: Going it alone, working for IBM, 1972–78....................53
12: Views on the one-party state, late 1970s.......................56
13: Explaining the coup attempt of 1980..........................59
14: Independence Day arrest, 1980....................................62
15: The legal process, 1981–85..........................................71

Appendices: Musakanya's writings..................................79