

After Redundancy

The Experience of Economic Insecurity

John Westergaard, Iain Noble and Alan Walker

Polity Press

Contents

List of tables and figures	ix
Preface	xi
Introduction: the study	i
1 THE ECONOMIC AND POLITICAL CONTEXT
From social reconstruction through corporatism to neo-liberalism	7
Perceptions of unemployment and the unemployed	13
Labour market insecurity and class structure	18
The local context	25
2 THE COMING OF REDUNDANCY
The people who lost their jobs	30
News of the plant closure	32
Non-resistance and division of views	34
Redundancy payments and their distribution	40
Views of the payments	45
3 THE IMPACT OF REDUNDANCY
The First Search for New Work
Early initiative – and its irrelevance	49
Means to the search for jobs	53
Registration as unemployed	56
4 THE IMPACT OF REDUNDANCY
Economic Experience over Three Years
Re-employment, unemployment and discouragement	59
Class polarization of the declining labour market	62
Social differences in withdrawal from the labour market	67

Class divisions in and out of the market	68
The widening of the market gap over time	71
Incomes three years after redundancy	75

5 RE-EMPLOYMENT AND UNEMPLOYMENT

Reactions to redundancy	81
Patterns of post-redundancy experience	82
Re-employment and 'secondary redundancy'	85
Commitment to paid employment	90
The experience of unemployment	94
Partial withdrawal from the labour market and social life	98
Redundancy payments and their uses	100

6 RETIREMENT AND EARLY RETIREMENT

Early retirement: demand push or supply pull?	104
The impact of redundancy on employment status	105
Normal retirement: those retiring at 65	109
The decision to take early retirement	110
Pressures on older workers to take early retirement	114
Social exclusion, discouragement and early retirement	120
Attitudes towards retirement	122
Attitudes towards re-employment	125

7 VOTING AND DEFECTION FROM LABOUR

Economic experience versus political views: a disjunction?	127
Voting trends	130
Defections from Labour and socio-political division	132
Socio-economic factors in defection from Labour	136
Reasons for defection from Labour	139

8 AMBIGUITIES OF SOCIO-POLITICAL ORIENTATION

For peace in industry	147
For labour solidarity	151
Conflicts of 'conventional wisdom'	153
Ostensible inconsistencies of opinion	155
Varieties of 'inconsistency'	159
Sources of 'anti-militancy'	162
Views of British society	164

9 CONCLUSIONS

The survey as a case study	169
Unemployment and non-employment	170
Divisions of economic experience	171
The need for an employment policy	175
Trends and divisions of political opinion	180
Appendix 1 Response to the Survey	185
Appendix 2 Summary of the Interview Schedule	186
References	195
Index	203