

SCIENCE IN THE PROVINCES

Scientific Communities and Provincial Leadership
in France, 1860–1930

MARY JO NYE

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA PRESS
Berkeley Los Angeles London

CONTENTS

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS	ix
INTRODUCTION: THE PARIS-PROVINCES DICHOTOMY	1
1 FRENCH UNIVERSITY SCIENCE BEFORE THE FIRST WORLD WAR	10
Structure and Reforms in the Early Third Republic	11
The Applied Sciences and Specialization	23
2 NANCY: THE GERMAN CONNECTION, SCIENTIFIC RIVALRY, AND N-RAYS	33
Science and the Aftermath of the German Victory at Sedan	35
Town and Gown: The Reciprocal Relationship	42
Scandal and the Scientific Community: The N-Ray Episode	53
3 GRENOBLE: FROM RAOULT'S PHYSICAL CHEMISTRY TO INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC CENTER	78
Early Scientific Leaders in Grenoble	81
The Growth of Electrical Science and Technology	86
From Mountain Village to International Student Center	90
Applied Science versus Fundamental Science	93
François Raoult and the Rise of Physical Chemistry as a Discipline	98
4 TOULOUSE: POLITICS, ENTREPRENEURSHIP, AND SABATIER'S CHEMISTRY PROGRAM	117

	The Politics of Building Republican Science	119
	The Art of Institute Building	126
	Paul Sabatier and Modern Catalytic Chemistry	137
5	LYON: APPLIED CHEMISTRY, VICTOR GRIGNARD, AND THE EXPERIENCE OF THE FIRST WORLD WAR	154
	A Marriage of Science and Industry	157
	Victor Grignard and Organic Synthesis	164
	The Legacy of the First World War	187
6	BORDEAUX: CATHOLICISM, CONSERVATISM, AND THE INFLUENCE OF PIERRE DUHEM	195
	The Conservative Tradition in Science	196
	Pierre Duhem and Scientific Skepticism	208
7	CONCLUSION: THE CHARACTER AND ACHIEVEMENTS OF FRENCH PROVINCIAL SCIENCE	224
	The Centralization Issue	224
	The Role of Applied Science	229
	The Question of Germany and National Scientific Productivity	235
	The Evaluation of Scientific Research Programs	238
	ABBREVIATIONS	243
	NOTES	247
	GLOSSARY	315
	INDEX	317