

THE STATE AND
PUBLIC POLICIES
IN EGYPT SINCE SADAT

Nazih N. Ayubi

Political Studies of the Middle East Series
No. 29

ITHACA PRESS
READING

1991

CONTENTS

List of tables	ix
Preface	xi

PART I

THE TRANSFORMATION OF ECONOMIC POLICY

1	From 'State Socialism' to Controlled Commercialism: the Emergence of Egypt's 'Open Door Policy' (infitah)	3
2	The Implementation of Infitah Under Sadat	27
3	Infitah: A Cost/Benefit Analysis	53

PART II

GOVERNMENT, THE PUBLIC BUREAUCRACY AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION

4	Continuity and Change in the System of Government	89
5	The Public Bureaucracy: Organisational Growth and Administrative Inefficiency	107
6	Local Administration: Decentralisation for Control	123

PART III

PUBLIC POLICIES IN EGYPT:
TECHNOCRACY IN A
A LESS-DEVELOPED COUNTRY

7	Scientists, Technocrats and Public Policy	141
8	Educational Policies and the 'Brain Drain'	171
9	The State and Agricultural Policy	199

PART IV

THE EGYPTIAN STATE IN CRISIS

10	Domestic Politics and State-Society Relations Under Mubarak	221
11	Civil-Military Relations	253
12	Etatism vs. Privatisation: the Problematic of the 1980s	267

PART V

FOREIGN POLICY:
A POLITICAL ECONOMY PERSPECTIVE

13	International Systemic Constraints and the Foreign Policy Process	291
14	Egypt, the Arabs, and the Superpowers	321
	Index	345