

Hitler's Berlin

The Speer Plans for Reshaping the Central City

by
Stephen D. Helmer

UMI RESEARCH PRESS

Ann Arbor, Michigan

Contents

List of Illustrations ix

Acknowledgments xxvii

Introduction 1

Some Definitions

Politics, Planning, and Design

Totalitarianism and the Modern Planning Tradition

Part I: The Plan

1 Fantasy into Reality 13

The Führer and His Architect

Design Strategy and Plan Evolution

The Speer Organization

2 Matured Vision: An Overview 27

3 Private Thoughts, Public Image 37

Political Goals through Physical Design

Planning Theory versus Propaganda

4 Transformation 49

What Was There

What Was Demolished

What Was Built

What Survived

Part II: The Context

5	Berlin: Building the Reich Capital	67
	Physical Links with the Past
	Planning Thought, 1910–1936
	Paris, Vienna, and Beyond
6	The Larger Planning Scene	81
	Modern Cities
	Authority and Utopia
	Totalitarian Design
	American Footnote
7	Speer: The Designer, the Man	95
	Preparation, Aptitudes, Early Interests
	Urbanism/Anti-Urbanism
	Berlin Plans
	Conclusion	105
	Appendix A Speer Plan Material in the Library of Congress	109
	Appendix B The Plan and the Public	115
	Illustrations	119
	Notes	281
	Bibliography	321
	Index	331