

MODERN JAPANESE THOUGHT

Edited by

BOB TADASHI WAKABAYASHI

York University, Toronto

CAMBRIDGE
UNIVERSITY PRESS

CONTENTS

Acknowledgments	page vii
1 Introduction Bob Tadashi Wakabayashi (York University, Toronto)	I
Pragmatic receptivity, 1774–1889	2
Intellectual retrogression, 1889–1945	10
Liberation in dependence, post-1945	18
2 Japan's Turn to the West Hirakawa Sukehiro (University of Tokyo), translated by Bob Tadashi Wakabayashi	30
The medium of books: First awareness of modern Western civilization	33
From books to experience: Late Tokugawa and early Meiji travelers	47
Teachers of "arts and sciences": Foreigners in Meiji government employ	65
The Japanization of Western thought and institutions	71
The spirit of capitalism: First translations from Western literature	76
The return to Japan: A consciousness of self in Meiji youth	86
3 Meiji Conservatism Kenneth B. Pyle (University of Washington)	98
The challenge of the Japanese enlightenment	100
Early Meiji conservatives: The moral imperative	104
Conservatives and the problem of foreign relations	112
The emergence of bureaucratic conservatism	121
The conservative approach to industrial society	129
The social program of the conservatives	136
The legacy of Meiji conservatism	142
4 Socialism, Liberalism, and Marxism, 1901–31 Peter Duus (Stanford University) and Irwin Scheiner (University of California, Berkeley)	147

The emergence of socialism	151
The collapse of the socialist movement	159
Minponshugi	167
Toward radicalism	175
The revival of socialism	182
Ôsugi Sakae and anarchosyndicalism	187
Yamakawa Hitoshi and the "change in direction"	193
Whose revolution is it? Fukumoto versus Yamakawa	198
Ideological dialectics: The paradox of Japanese Marxism	204
5 Japan's Revolt against the West Tetsuo Najita (University of Chicago) and H. D. Harootunian (University of Chicago)	207
Introduction	207
Restorationist revolt	209
Culturalism	231
Cultural particularism	238
The debate on modernity	256
Epilogue	266
6 Postwar Social and Political Thought, 1945-90 Andrew E. Barshay (University of California, Berkeley)	273
The postwar moment: "Collective repentance" and beyond	273
The democratic enlightenment, 1945-60	279
Culture and nationality in post-Occupation Japan	308
The Anpo Watershed	322
Science and culture after Anpo	329
Beyond postwar	347
Bibliography	357
Index	382