

THE ECONOMICS OF 1992

The E. C. Commission's Assessment of the Economic Effects of Completing the Internal Market

MICHAEL EMERSON
MICHEL AUJEAN
MICHEL CATINAT
PHILIPPE GOYBET
ALEXIS JACQUEMIN

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS

Contents

Foreword	vii
Part A — Summary and conclusions	1
Part B — The European market, its barriers and methods of evaluation	11
1. Dimensions and structure of the internal market	11
1.1. Size and performance	11
1.2. Market shares	15
2. Typology of market barriers and methods of evaluation	21
2.1. Typology of market barriers	21
2.2. Economic impact of barriers of different types	22
2.3. Methods of evaluation	24
2.4. The important economic concepts	28
Part C — The effects of market barriers	31
3. Principal types of barriers	32
3.1. Industrialists' perceptions of the main barriers	32
3.2. Customs procedures	33
3.3. Technical regulations	39
3.4. Public procurement	47
3.5. Fiscal frontiers	57
4. Industry case-studies	66
4.1. Food-processing industry	67
4.2. Pharmaceuticals industry	71
4.3. Automobile industry	75
4.4. Textiles and clothing	79
4.5. Building products	82
4.6. Telecommunications equipment	85
4.7. Particular market regimes — agriculture, steel and energy	88

Contents

5.	Services case-studies	98
5.1.	Financial services	98
5.2.	Business services	110
5.3.	Road transport	113
5.4.	Air transport	115
5.5.	Telecommunications services	117
	Part D — The effects of market integration	123
6.	Integration and the effects of market size	126
6.1.	Size phenomena: economies of scale	126
6.2.	Trade expansion and gains in technical efficiency	140
7.	Integration and competition effects	145
7.1.	Effects of competition on costs and prices	145
7.2.	Non-price effects: competition and innovation	157
8.	Business perceptions, strategies and accompanying policies	163
8.1.	Business perceptions	163
8.2.	Business strategies	170
8.3.	Accompanying microeconomic policies	178
9.	Illustration of gains from market integration	183
	Part E — Overall quantitative assessment	193
10.	Microeconomic and macroeconomic approaches	193
10.1.	Microeconomic evaluation	196
10.2.	Macroeconomic evaluation	204
10.3.	Synthesis and conditions for success	218
	Annexes
A.	Microeconomic methodology	223
B.	Macroeconomic methodology	251
C.	Statistical tables	265
	References	286
	List of studies	293
	Index	296