

The Market for North Sea Crude Oil

ROBERT MABRO
ROBERT BACON
MARGARET CHADWICK
MARK HALLIWELL
DAVID LONG

Published by the Oxford University Press
for the Oxford Institute for Energy Studies 1986

CONTENTS

	Page
Preface	v
Reader's Guide	ix
Abbreviations	xii
Glossary	xiv
A Summing Up	xvii
Contents	xxiii
Tables	xxv
Figures	xxxi
Chapter 1 The North Sea in Perspective	1
Part I: Market Structure, Trade and Production
Chapter 2 North Sea Crudes and Oilfields	13
Chapter 3 The Structure of the North Sea Crude Oil Market: Producers, Sellers, Buyers	27
Chapter 4 The Pattern of International Trade	57
Chapter 5 The Costs and Time Patterns of Production	71
Part II: The Institutional Framework
Chapter 6 General Introduction to Part II	91
Chapter 7 UK Licensing and Production Policies	93
Chapter 7 The UK. The Place and Role of BNOC in the Institutional Framework	99
Chapter 8 The UK. The Oil Fiscal Regime	109
Chapter 9 Norwegian Licensing and Production Policies	135
Chapter 10 Norway. The Oil Fiscal Regime	147
Part III: The Brent Market
Chapter 11 The Origins and Growth of the Brent Market	161

Chapter 12	The Mode of Operation of the Brent Market	169
	Appendix to Chapter 12: Typical Book-Out Telex	185
Chapter 13	The Growth and Structure of the Brent Market	189
Part IV: Markets and Prices
Chapter 14	The Prices of North Sea Crudes	219
Chapter 15	The Role and Influence of the North Sea in the World Oil Market	239
Part V: Technical Annexes
Annex 1	Temporal Production Patterns for the UKCS and Norwegian Continental Shelf	251
Annex 2	The Gains from Tax Spinning	271
Annex 3	A Model of the Equilibrium Number of Forward Deals in a Market with Hedgers and Speculators	275
Annex 4	The Brent Market and the Efficient Markets Hypothesis	289
Annex 5	Statistical Testing and North Sea Crude Prices	293
Annex 6	Analysis of the Relationship between the Brent Netback and Spot Crude Price	301
Annex 7	The Short-run Price Variability of Certain Crudes	311
Annex 8	Statistical Appendix	317