Introduction	1
0.1 General remarks	1
0.2 Aims of the study	5
0.3 Existing research	9
0.4 Organisation of the book	12
CHAPTER 1
Theory and methodology of the research	15
1.1 Nominal system in Old Germanic languages	15
1.2 Nominal paradigms in Old Germanic languages	18
1.3 Morphological restructuring of the nominal system in early Germanic	21
1.3.1 Introduction	21
1.3.2 Interparadigmatic transfers	22
1.3.3 Intraparadigmatic transfers	26
1.3.4 Syncretism in nominal inflection in Old Germanic languages	27
1.4 Theoretical framework	29
1.4.1 Introduction	29
1.4.2 Analogy	32
1.4.3 Markedness	35
1.4.4 Iconicity, uniformity and transparency of the paradigms	39
1.4.5 Productivity and paradigm stability	41
1.4.6 Factors conditioning the restructuring process	46
1.4.6.1 Frequency effects in nominal morphology	48
1.4.6.2 Salience of inflectional marking	53
1.4.6.3 Other factors: gender, semantics, syllable structure	58
1.5 Methodology of the research	60
1.5.1 Terms and definitions	60
1.5.2 The corpora: Characteristics and methodological considerations	64
1.5.3 Scope of the study and procedures	68

CHAPTER 2

Nominal inflection in Proto-Germanic

77

- 2.1 Introduction 77
- 2.2 Reorganisation of the nominal inflection in Proto-Germanic 79
 - 2.2.1 The Proto-Germanic nominal system: General characteristics 79
 - 2.2.2 Restructuring of the system: Tendencies and patterns 83
 - 2.2.3 Restructuring of the system: Minor declensional types 92
 - 2.2.3.1 i-stems 92
 - 2.2.3.2 u-stems 98
 - 2.2.3.3 Root nouns 101
 - 2.2.3.4 r-stems 103
 - 2.2.3.5 s-stems 105
 - 2.2.3.6 nd-stems 109
 - 2.2.3.7 p-stems 111
 - 2.2.4 Interparadigmatic realignments in Proto-Germanic:
A cross-declensional overview 111
 - 2.2.5 Discussion 121
- 2.3 Conclusion 126

CHAPTER 3

Nominal inflection in Old English

129

- 3.1 Introduction 129
- 3.2 Diatopic and diachronic dimension of the study 130
 - 3.2.1 Early and Late Old English 130
 - 3.2.2 Anglian and Saxon material 131
- 3.3 Characteristics of the restructuring process in Old English 133
- 3.4 Old English phonological developments in unstressed syllables 135
- 3.5 Data analysis 137
 - 3.5.1 Corpus and methodological considerations 137
 - 3.5.2 i-stems 140
 - 3.5.2.1 General characteristics 140
 - 3.5.2.2 Restructuring of the i-stem paradigm 142
 - 3.5.2.3 Results of the investigation 149
 - 3.5.3 u-stems 157
 - 3.5.3.1 General remarks 157
 - 3.5.3.2 Results of the investigation 161
 - 3.5.3.3 An excursus on sunu 174
 - 3.5.4 Root nouns 175
 - 3.5.4.1 General characteristics 175
 - 3.5.4.2 Results of the investigation 179

3.5.5	r -stems	189
3.5.5.1	General characteristics	189
3.5.5.2	Results of the investigation	192
3.5.6	s -stems	198
3.5.6.1	General characteristics	198
3.5.6.2	Results of the investigation	203
3.5.6.3	An excursus on Old English cild	211
3.5.7	nd -stems	213
3.5.7.1	General characteristics	213
3.5.7.2	Results of the investigation	216
3.5.8	Dental stems	221
3.6	Summary of the results and overview of the tendencies	224
3.7	Taxonomic implications of the study	239
3.8	Conclusions	245

CHAPTER 4

Nominal inflection in Old Frisian 249

4.1	Introduction	249
4.2	Corpus and methodological considerations	252
4.3	Restructuring process in Old Frisian: Emerging patterns	256
4.4	Old Frisian phonological developments and their morphological implications	257
4.5	Data analysis	259
4.5.1	Methodological considerations	259
4.5.2	i -stems	261
4.5.2.1	General characteristics	261
4.5.2.2	Results of the investigation	264
4.5.2.3	An excursus on the alternation in the singular paradigm of heavy-syllable feminine stems	268
4.5.3	u -stems	271
4.5.3.1	General characteristics	271
4.5.3.2	Results of the investigation	275
4.5.4	Root nouns	278
4.5.4.1	General characteristics	278
4.5.4.2	Results of the investigation	280
4.5.5	r -stems	286
4.5.5.1	General characteristics	286
4.5.5.2	Results of the investigation	287
4.5.6	s -stems	291
4.5.6.1	General characteristics	291
4.5.6.2	Results of the investigation	293

4.5.7	nd -stems	295
4.5.7.1	General characteristics	295
4.5.7.2	Results of the investigation	296
4.5.8	Dental stems	298
4.6	Summary of the results and overview of the tendencies	299
4.7	Taxonomic implications of the study	306
4.8	Conclusions	307

CHAPTER 5

Nominal inflection in Old Saxon

311

5.1	Introduction	311
5.2	The placement of Old Saxon in West Germanic	315
5.3	Corpus and methodological considerations	320
5.4	Restructuring process in Old Saxon: Patterns	322
5.5	Phonological developments in unstressed syllables	325
5.6	Data analysis	329
5.6.1	Methodological considerations	329
5.6.2	i -stems	331
5.6.2.1	General characteristics	331
5.6.2.2	Results of the investigation	337
5.6.3	u -stems	345
5.6.3.1	General characteristics	345
5.6.3.2	Results of the investigation	351
5.6.3.3	Excursus on the i -marker in the DAT. SG. and NOM. PL.	355
5.6.4	Root nouns	359
5.6.4.1	General characteristics	359
5.6.4.2	Results of the investigation	361
5.6.5	r -stems	366
5.6.5.1	General characteristics	366
5.6.5.2	Results of the investigation	367
5.6.6	s -stems	369
5.6.6.1	General characteristics	369
5.6.6.2	Results of the investigation	370
5.6.7	nd -stems	373
5.6.7.1	General characteristics	373
5.6.7.2	Results of the investigation	376
5.6.8	Dental stems	379
5.7	Summary of the results and overview of the tendencies	379
5.8	Taxonomic implications of the study	387
5.9	Conclusions	389

CHAPTER 6

Nominal inflection in Old Low Franconian 393

- 6.1 Introduction 393
- 6.2 Corpus and methodological considerations 397
- 6.3 Restructuring process in Old Low Franconian: Patterns 400
- 6.4 Phonological developments in Old Low Franconian 403
- 6.5 Data analysis 406
 - 6.5.1 Methodological considerations 406
 - 6.5.2 The status of the i-stems in Old Low Franconian 408
 - 6.5.3 u-stems 413
 - 6.5.3.1 An excursus on the DAT. SG. and NOM. PL. 418
 - 6.5.4 Root nouns 420
 - 6.5.5 r-stems 424
 - 6.5.6 s-stems 428
 - 6.5.7 nd-stems 432
 - 6.5.8 Dental stems 434
- 6.6 Summary of the results and overview of the tendencies 435
- 6.7 Taxonomic implications of the study 442
- 6.8 Conclusions 443

CHAPTER 7

Patterns of reorganisation of the nominal system in early Northern West Germanic: A comparative overview 447

- 7.1 Introduction 447
- 7.2 Overview of the tendencies 448
- 7.3 Explaining the divergent development of the nominal inflection
across Northern West Germanic 467

CHAPTER 8

Mechanisms and dynamics of the restructuring process in West Germanic 481

- 8.1 Introduction 481
- 8.2 The course of restructuring: The prehistoric stage 482
- 8.3 The historical stage of restructuring: Emerging patterns 485
- 8.4 Framing the mechanisms of the process 487
- 8.5 Functionality of the system 491
- 8.6 Factors conditioning the restructuring process 496
 - 8.6.1 Frequency of occurrence 497
 - 8.6.2 Salience of inflectional markers 501
 - 8.6.3 Semantics 506

8.6.4 Other controlling factors	508
8.6.4.1 Gender	508
8.6.4.2 Prosodic structure: stem weight	510
8.6.5 Interactions between conditioning factors	512
8.7 Implications for the taxonomy of nouns in early Northern West Germanic	514
8.8 Concluding remarks	516
 Conclusions	 519
