The Semantics of Syntactic Change
Aspects of the Evolution of do in English

by
Dieter Stein

Mouton de Gruyter
Berlin • New York 1990
Contents

Preface

List of abbreviations

Chapter One: Introduction
1. Theoretical motivation
2. Why re-study the development of do?
3. Theories and data
4. Heterogeneity of explanatory dimensions
5. Structure of presentation

Chapter Two: Do up to the fifteenth century
1. Phases of do development
2. The origin of "meaningless periphrastic do"
3. Do in the Paston letters (1422-1509)
4. The democratization of do: a speculation

Chapter Three: Do and discourse structure
1. Do as a marker of discourse-semantic prominence
2. Saliency and foregrounding
3. Foreground and contrastiveness
4. Local foreground structure markers

Chapter Four: Syntax and style in the sixteenth century
1. Do in the sixteenth century: the quantitative problem
2. Standard and prose style
3. Main stylistic currents
4. Relevant stylistic structures
5. Imitating Latin syntax
6. Antithesis
4. Diachronic interpretation of the synchronic pattern
4.1. Analysis of the preterite and diachronic interpretation of the subcategorical pattern
4.2. Stability of the variational pattern
5. Further strategies of avoiding (d)st
6. Negatives

Chapter Eight: Do in questions in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries: the statistical evidence
1. Methodological considerations
2. Corpora analyzed
3. From raw data to indices: an example
4. Periphrasis frequency in questions in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries: the evidence

Chapter Nine: The mechanics of generalization
1. Individual utterance versus system
2. Naturalness and isolect
3. Micro-structure of generalization I
4. Rhetorical and other questions
5. Micro-structure of generalization II
6. Frequency and residuals
7. Poetic uses

Chapter Ten: Third singular morphology and syntax
1. Inflectional ending and verbal syntax
2. The transition from th to s
3. The phonotactic factor
4. Parallels between third singular and do development

Chapter Eleven: Subjunctive
1. Overview and purpose
2. Historical development of subjunctive marking
3. The structure of subjunctive marking in Early Modern English
4. The inflectional motivation of subjunctive marking
5. Do in subjunctives
Chapter Twelve: Wh-questions 255

1. Motivations for analyzing wh-questions 255
2. Empirical data 256
3. Results 258
4. Interpretation 259
5. Dimensions of directionality 262

Chapter Thirteen: Natural and social aspects 267

1. The semantic unity of do uses 267
   1.1. The rise of epistemic do 267
   1.2. Do in negation 269
   1.3. Exclamatives 271
   1.4. Emphatic do 272
   1.5. Typology and grammaticalization 275
   1.6. Semantics of do and inversion 278
   1.7. Further word-order factors 280
2. Natural tendencies 282
   2.1. Motivations for naturalness 282
      2.1.1. Individual and group 282
      2.1.2. Natural tendencies and prediction 284
      2.1.3. Conflict between internal and external factors 287
      2.1.4. Types of natural tendencies 289
      2.1.5. Theoretical orientation of naturalism 292
   2.2. Natural tendencies in the development of do 296
      2.2.1. Similarity 296
      2.2.2. Economy and simplification 300
      2.2.3. Long-term and short-term goals 306
      2.2.4. Syntactic environing of phonological processes 311
3. Semantic directionality: subjectivization 313
4. Social and varietal aspects 317
   4.1. Do and written standard 317
   4.2. The diversity of do meanings 318
   4.3. Order and grammar 322
   4.4. Medium and meanings of do 325
   4.5. The unfashionableness of thou 328

Conclusion 333