

Education.
in the Development of Tanzania

1919-90

Lene Buchert

James Currey
LONDON

Mkuki na Nyota
DAR ES SALAAM

Ohio University Press
ATHENS

Contents

List of Maps, Figures & Tables	ix
List of Abbreviations & Acronyms	xi
Preface	xiii
One
Introduction	1
Underlying Understandings and Methods	1
Research Themes and Structure of the Book	4
Two
Education for Indirect Rule, Peasant Production & Western Civilisation 1919-46
The Political and Socio-Economic Setting	7
The Indirect Rule System	8
The Formation of Peasant Societies	9
The Role of Formal Education in Political and Socio-Economic Development	15
The Policy of Education for Adaptation	17
The Adoption of Education for Adaptation in Tanganyika	20
The Provision of Education	23
Education for Adaptation as a Mechanism of Social Control: Concluding Remarks	30
Three
The Adaptation of Peasant Production: The Case of Nyakato
The Establishment of Nyakato as an Agricultural Training Centre	35
The Functioning of Nyakato 1933-39	39
The Reaction to Nyakato	41
Technical Innovation of Peasant Production: Concluding Remarks	44

Four	49
Education for Self-Government, Capitalist Development & Citizenship 1947-61
The New Metropolitan Goals for Education and Development	49
The Political and Economic Circumstances in Tanganyika	52
The Purposes of Education as Stated by the British Administration	57
The Provision of Education	59
Education for Modernisation as a Mechanism of Social Differentiation: Concluding Remarks	63
 Five
Mass Adult Education & Community Development: The Case of Singida District
From Social Welfare to Social Development 1947-61	73
The Socio-Economic Characteristics of Singida District	76
The Organisation of the Literacy Campaign 1958-62	78
The Outcomes of the Campaign	80
From Literacy to Community Development	82
Mass Education for Local Development: Concluding Remarks	85
 Six
Education for Socialism, Self-Reliance & Social Commitment 1962-81
The Goals and Strategy for National Development	90
From Manpower Development to Education for Self-Reliance	93
Education for Liberation and Participation	94
The Political and Socio-Economic Development	97
From Modernisation to Socio-Economic Transformation	98
The Priority of the Educational Sector	103
The Provision of Education	105
The Access Dimension of the Educational Reform	112
The Content Dimension of the Educational Reform	114
Education for Economic Development and Social Participation: Concluding Remarks	118

Seven	123
Societal Innovation through Education: The Community School Movement 1971-82
The Context of the Community School Idea	124
The Rise and Fall of Kwamsisi as an Innovative Experiment	125
The Goals and Reality of Kwamsisi Community School 1971-75	127
The Interaction of National and Local Factors	130
The Local Defence of a Nationally Abandoned Idea	132
The Replication of Kwamsisi as a Model:
The Case of Kwalukonge	133
The Local Context of Kwalukonge	134
The Functioning of Kwalukonge Community School	136
The Use of Education to Promote Societal Innovation:
Concluding Remarks	139
 Eight	 144
Education in the Context of Structural Adjustment 1982-90
Altered Development Priorities	144
The Redirection of Education	147
The Establishment of Adult Functional Literacy Schemes in Tanzania	151
The Local Context in Dodoma Rural District	152
The Participation in Adult Literacy Programmes in Mwumi Makulu, Bahi and Dabalo 1977-89	153
The Functioning of the Classes	158
The Prospect for Educational Transformation in the 1990s:
Concluding Remarks	162
 Nine	 167
Education in the Development of Tanzania: Conclusions & Perspectives
The Possibility of the Use of Education in Development	171
Practical and Research Implications	173
 Bibliography	 175
Index	189