

Divine Mania

Alteration of Consciousness in Ancient Greece

Yulia Ustinova

 Routledge
Taylor & Francis Group
LONDON AND NEW YORK

Contents

Preface	viii
Acknowledgements	xiii
Abbreviations	xv
Introduction	1
Socrates on divine mania	1
Mania: words and images	2
Mania as mental disorder: its definition and characteristics	5
Madness in context: the importance of historicism	13
Alterations of consciousness between unity and diversity: aspects of methodology and terminology	17
The scope of this book and its sources	29
1. Prophetic mania	55
Inspired prophecy: definitions, ancient and modern	55
Inspired divination in Greece	58
Prophetic priests	58
Laymen who received oracular messages in sanctuaries	67
Unaffiliated seers	71
Inspired prophets as instruments of the gods	75
Inspired prophecy in Greece as compared to other cultures	78
Prophecy in Mesopotamia in comparison with Greece	79
Prophecy in ancient Israel in comparison with Greece	81
Conclusions	85
2. Telestic mania and near-death experiences	113
Mystery initiations	115
The nature of the initiate's experience I: mania for mania's sake or for its treatment	117
The Corybantic rites	118
Bacchic and Sabaziac initiations	122

vi Contents

The nature of the initiate's experience II: paradosis and epopteia 126
The core experience in the 'great mysteries,' mania, and alteration of consciousness 129
Techniques of 'getting ready' for the core experience of mystery initiations and mania 132
Mystery rites and near-death experiences 136
Conclusions 143

3 Bakcheia 169

Dionysus and individual madmen in myths 170
Dionysus and destructive collective mania in myth 172
Bakchai and bakchoi in myth, poetry, and art 174
Bakcheia and gender 179
The historicity of the savage rites 181
The dynamics of the thiasos 187
Bakcheia from a comparative viewpoint 192
Aspects of physiology and psychology of bakcheia 194
Conclusions 197

4 Mania on the battlefield and on the march 217

Combat fury: Lyssa 217
Psychological injuries and combat stress: Phobos 224
Panic 227
Battlefield epiphanies 231
Conclusions 233

5 Nympholepsy 245

Nympholepsy, panolepsy, and vatic abilities 245
Nympholepts and their caves 248
Conclusions 255

6 Poetic mania 265

The Muses, memory, and inspiration 265
Music and alteration of consciousness 266
The nature of poetic inspiration: Plato 268
The nature of poetic inspiration: Aristotle 270
Modern poets and musicians and their inspiration 272
Enthusiastic audiences 276
Conclusions 279

7	Erotic mania	294
	Plato on the erotic mania	294
	Greeks on erôs as mania	298
	Blessings of the erotic mania?	302
	Conclusions	305
8	The philosopher's mania and his path to truth	313
	Socrates' mania	315
	Plato's mystical experiences	322
	Mania and Archaic sages: Epimenides, Aethalides, and Hermotimus	328
	Mania and Presocratic philosophers: Pythagoras, Parmenides, and Empedocles	330
	Shamans and mystics?	337
	Coda: Democritus the mad philosopher	341
	Conclusions	342
	Epilogue: perspectives on the divine mania	370
	Index	381