

---

PUTTING POPULAR MUSIC
IN ITS PLACE

---

CHARLES HAMM

Emeritus Professor of Music, Dartmouth College

CAMBRIDGE
UNIVERSITY PRESS

---

CONTENTS

---

Acknowledgements	page ix
Preface	xi
1 Modernist narratives and popular music	1
2 Rock and the facts of life	41
3 Changing patterns in society and music: the US since World War II	55
4 "If I Were a Voice": or, The Hutchinson Family and popular song as political and social protest	98
5 Some thoughts on the measurement of popularity in music	116
6 Elvis , a review	131
7 Home cooking and American soul in black South African popular music	139
8 Rock 'n' roll in a very strange society	150
9 African-American music, South Africa, and apartheid	167
10 "The constant companion of man": Separate Development, Radio Bantu, and music	210
11 Privileging the moment of reception: music and radio in South Africa	249
12 Music and radio in the People's Republic of China	270
13 Towards a new reading of Gershwin	306
14 A blues for the ages	325
15 Graceland revisited	336
16 Dvořák in America: nationalism, racism, and national race	344
17 The last minstrel show?	354
18 The Role of Rock , a review	367

CONTENTS

19	Genre, performance, and ideology in the early songs of Irving Berlin	370
20	Epilogue: John Cage revisited	381
	Index	386