

Sweden

The

Nation's History

Franklin D. Scott

With an epilogue by Steven Koblik

Enlarged Edition

Southern Illinois University Press
Carbondale and Edwardsville

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Preface	vii
A Note on Spelling and Swedish Words	xi
I. The Beginnings of Land and People	3
II. The Far-Ranging Vikings	16
III. The Coming of Christianity	32
IV. Medieval Sweden	45
The Early Middle Ages	46
A Medieval Commercial and Social Revolution	49
“On Law Shall the Land Be Built”	58
Kingly Chaos	66
Magnus Eriksson (1316–74; King, 1319–64)	72
The Holy Birgitta	77
Margareta and the Union of Kalmar	79
V. The Fifteenth Century: The Union That Failed	87
The Union of Mutual Frustration	87
Socioeconomic Stagnation	104
The Beginnings of the Riksdag	111
Unionism, Nationalism, and Constitutionalism: An Interpretive Summary	113

xiv Table of Contents

VI. The Sixteenth Century: Founding the National State	118
Gustav Vasa and the Birth of Modern Sweden	118
Winning Independence	118
Problems of the Young State	123
Beginnings of the Swedish Reformation	124
Threats and Alarums	131
Constructive State Building	136
Consolidation Under the Vasa Sons	141
Problems of Succession and Family Controversies	141
Kings, Nobles, and Political Structure	145
Aggressive Foreign Policy: Expansion Abroad	149
Protestantism Questioned and Confirmed	153
Slowly Changing Economy and Society	156
VII. Sweden's Age of Greatness: I. The Struggle for Empire and Domestic Reform, 1611–54	162
Gustav II Adolf: The Man and His Background	162
The War of Kalmar and the Peace of Knäred (1613)	166
Russian Involvement and the Peace of Stolbova (1617)	168
The Polish Serial, to the Truce of Altmark (1629)	169
Glory and Death in Germany, 1630–32	174
Systematizing the Governmental Structure, 1611–34	182
Seventeenth-Century Socioeconomic Reconstruction	188
New Emphases on Religion and Education	194
Diplomacy and War Go On and On	198
Kristina, Unhappy Heiress to Glory	201
VIII. Sweden's Age of Greatness: II. Conquest, Autocracy, and Collapse, 1654–1718	207
Karl X Gustav and the Resumption of Conquest	207
The Establishment of Autocracy under Karl XI	211
Reduction and the Accompanying Social and Political Revolution	216
Indelningsverk : Military Reconstruction	220
The Cultural Stimulus	222
Karl XII	225

IX. The Age of Freedom, 1718–71	237
The Constitutional Experiment, 1718–72	238
Foreign Intrigue and Internal Politics	244
Scientific Achievement	252
Population, Agriculture, and Mercantilism	259
X. The Gustavian Era	268
Gustav III (1746–92; King, 1771–92)	269
The Cultural Flowering	280
Gustav IV Adolf (1778–1837; King, 1792–1809)	286
Agricultural Reorganization	288
The Political-Diplomatic Sector and the Revolution of 1809	292
The Constitution of 1809	296
Karl August the New Crown Prince	299
XI. The Bernadotte Dynasty and the Union with Norway	301
The Dynastic Revolution: The Second Phase	302
The Diplomatic Revolution	306
The Union with Norway	311
Note on Finland and Norway	315
XII. On the Road to Neutrality and Peace, 1810–1914	317
A Foreign Policy of Temptation and Restraint	317
Dissolution of the Union with Norway, 1905	327
XIII. Social Transformation of the Nineteenth Century	334
From Society of Status to Class Society	334
Effects of Population Growth	338
The Structure of the City	343
Life Styles	346
Schools	351
The Temperance Movement	353
Religious Awakening	355
Women, Arise!	361
Sexual Mores	363
The Great Migration	366
A Century of Change	377

XIV. The Democratic Breakthrough of the Nineteenth Century:
I. Political Reforms and Disruptive Issues	379
Political Change in the Early Nineteenth Century	379
The Riksdag Reform	387
Disruptive Issues and the Struggle for Democratic
Government, 1866–1914	393
Taxation	396
Tariffs	396
Defense	397
Suffrage	402
XV. The Democratic Breakthrough of the Nineteenth Century:
II. Folk Movements and Political Parties	409
Folk Movements and Democracy	409
The Trade Unions	412
Origins of the Consumer Cooperative Movement	419
Political Parties and the Fight for Parliamentary
Government	422
The Rise of the Liberals	424
The Social Democrats	429
XVI. The Industrial Breakthrough	436
Population and the Transformation of the
Work Force	437
Progress in Agriculture	441
Improvement in Transportation	444
Forest-based Industry	446
Iron Ore, Iron, and Steel	449
Invention and Manufacturing	452
Energy	456
Finance	458
Foreign Trade	461
The Bases of Sweden's Economic
Accomplishment	463
XVII. Sweden and World War I, 1914–1918	468
XVIII. Democratic Sweden, 1918–45	476
Building a Viable Democratic Political System	477

Political Readjustment	483
Economic Adjustment, 1920-40	488
The Cooperatives—a Buyers' Democracy?	491
Progress toward Social Reform	494
A New Course in Foreign Affairs	499
World War II	503
XIX. The Era of the Welfare State	510
Active Neutrality	510
Nordic and European Cooperation	513
The Economy and Economic Democracy	516
The Restructuring of Society	525
Democratizing Education	532
The New Constitution and Political Change	538
Summation—the Nature of the Welfare State	543
XX. The Multifaceted Culture of the Twentieth Century	549
Sweden Writes	549
From Theater to Television	558
Painting, Sculpture, and Architecture	560
Music for All the People	565
Changing Styles in Handicrafts	567
Sports and Recreation	570
Religion in the Twentieth Century	571
The Intellectual Scene	575
On the Characteristics of Swedish Society	581
Epilogue. Sweden and the Crisis of the Welfare State	587
Abbreviations	618
Notes	619
Selected Bibliography	638
Index	663

Illustrations follow pages 46, 302, 526.